SPAIN THREATENED WITH REVOLUTION

Constitutional Guarantees Suspended—Troops Fire on Bilbao Mob.

REBELS PROCLAIM COMMUNE

Authorities Driven from Two Towns—General Strike All Over Country Ordered for To-day.

MADRID, Sept. 19.—Spain is face to face with a crisis equal in gravity to that following the riots in Barcelona in 1909.

The agitation and the power of the agitators on the masses have increased in proportion to the rigor of the repressive measures undertaken by the Government. What at its origin was purely a labor movement has now developed into a revolutionary conflict, a commune having actually been proclaimed in two towns near Valencia. At these places the authorities were driven out of the districts.

The affiliated trades unions have decided to call a general strike to-morrow throughout the length and breadth of Spain, and the Government, abandoning the tone of optimism heretofore maintained, to-day decided upon the step of "suspending the Constitutional guarantees" throughout the country—in other words, potential martial law.

It was explained that in doing this the Government did not seek to persecute the trades unions, but it was made quite clear that any attempt to stir up a rebellion would be severely punished. All meetings have been forbidden.

The military authorities, it is further stated officially, will not assume control except in extreme cases.

"The grave measure we have taken is absolutely imperative not only for the defense of public institutions but for society itself," said Premier Canalejas to-night. "The suspension of the Constitutional guarantees has been decided upon by the Government in the presence of a movement unmistakeably revolutionary and anarchistic in character—a movement, it may be assumed, directed against all social order."

The Government had long been aware that some such movement was contemplated for the end of September, but was unwilling to take radical measures until its true character was apparent beyond the possibility of error. The movement was supported by the Socialists and possibly the extreme Republican Party, and was directed by a committee composed of Spaniards and foreigners, with headquarters at Barcelona.

Emissaries were sent out throughout the peninsula with instructions to foment general strikes in all the provinces, the object being to paralyze the life of the nation by stopping all public services. The Government laid its plans accordingly, and is resolved upon the re-establishment of order as rapidly as possible and at any cost.

The authorities assert that the General Union of Labor, which proclaimed a general strike, represents only a limited number of workers. Among the delegates who voted for this strike was the President of the railroad workers, but as this union has only recently been organized it is possible that the movement will fail so far as it concerns the railways.

The most serious situation at present is in and near Valencia, where a general strike was declared yesterday. The city was at once placed under martial law, and though there was more or less rioting throughout the day the authorities had matters pretty well in hand until after dark, when the disturbers vented their fury in an attack upon the officials in the adjacent township of Cullera.

The rioters murdered the Judge and wounded other officers of a court which had been engaged in the trial of those who had been arrested earlier in the day. The mob was finally dispersed by guards from the Custom House.

Late dispatches from Valencia say that the agitation in that city was renewed to-night. A mob threw up a barricade and derailed a tram car in one part of the city, while another mob tried to storm a convent. In the street fighting one workman was killed and several were wounded.

It is reported that the residents of Alcocer, before the troops arrived, burned the public buildings, dynamited the bridges, and cut the railroad.

The King summoned Premier Canalejas to the palace late to-night.

BILBAO, Sept. 19.—Troops this afternoon fired on a crowd that was endeavoring to free prisoners, including strike leaders, who were being taken through the streets.

Twenty-six persons were wounded.

The situation is grave.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—Insurance against the overthrow of the Spanish monarchy was effected at Lloyd's this afternoon.

The high rate of 25 guineas per cent. (£100) was paid for the policies.

VALENCIA, Sept. 19.—The inhabitants of the towns of Alcocer and Carcagente revolted to-day, drove out the authorities, and proclaimed a Commune. As soon as word of this reached Valencia a strong body of troops set off and occupied the two towns, as well as the town of Cullera, where yesterday a Judge was killed and several of his court officers were wounded.

The City of Valencia was comparatively quiet to-day, but there was much agitation in the outskirts near the railroad. A band of 3,000, many of whom are armed, are roaming over the country fomenting disturbances.

FERROL, Sept. 19.—The arsenal workers have joined the strike movement.

Three thousand of them paraded the streets to-day and ordered the storekeepers to close their places of business.

CERBERE, France, Sept. 19.—The strike at Seville is now general.

Groups of workmen have been parading through the city, forcing the factories to close, stoning the cars, and tearing up the tracks. Collisions with the police and civil guards are occurring constantly.

One band of rioters attempted to storm the branch office of the Crédit Lyonnais, but was repulsed by the police.

HIGHER SUGAR TO PAY FINES.

Trust Accused at Meeting of Cincinnati Housewives' League.

Special to The New York Times.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 19.—At a meeting this afternoon of the Cincinnati Housewives' Co-operative League, at the home of the President, Mrs. J. W. Ellms, the present high price of sugar was only one of the many matters that came up for lengthy discussion.

"The people are co-operating in paying 7½ and 8 cents per pound to reimburse the Sugar Trust for the fines that have been imposed upon it," said Mrs. Ellms, who is a prominent clubwoman of Cincinnati. "The high price is not caused by a demand in excess of the supply."

The co-operative members were advised not to buy any more sugar until there is a drop in the price, which, they say, is sure to come.

The league, which is an organization of housewives who co-operate to buy better goods at lower prices paid to retailers, is now engaged in buying a Fall supply in order to save money.

CARNEGIE SEES ONLY TAFT

And Says Democratic Opposition to Him Next Year Will Be Hopeless.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

CLASHMORE, Sutherland, Sept. 19.—Andrew Carnegie refused until to-day to say one word regarding the failure of the arbitration treaties to pass the Senate, but to-day he said he hailed President Taft's decision to meet the Senate's objections as worthy of him as a statesman of the front rank and as certain to insure the passage of the treaties before the end of the year.

Mr. Carnegie regarded the differences between the President and the Senate as deplorable and uncalled for, and he rejoices that victory is to come through mutual concessions, creditable, he declares, both to the President and the Senate.

Asked about the Presidency, Mr. Carnegie replied:

"No President ever better deserved a second term than Mr. Taft. He is the only possible Republican candidate. The insurgents will soon merge with the party."

Asked whom the Democrats would probably nominate, Mr. Carnegie replied:

"That matters little, though they have the choice of good men. Opposition to a President with such a record is hopeless."

MIND UPSET BY GRUDGE.

Wanted Rich Neighbor to Pay Him $20,000 for His Farm.

Special to The New York Times.

GREENWICH, Con., Sept. 19.—William J. Kenworthy, a small farmer, aged about 60 years, who has been in the town lock-up for two days on a charge of insanity made by his wife, was examined to-day by Dr. Griswold and Dr. Piatti by order of Judge Jeremiah Tierney of the Greenwich Probate Court. Following their report, Judge Tierney ordered that Kenworthy be committed to the Dr. Given's Sanitarium for treatment and observation for three months.

Kenworthy is a neighbor of William Stewart Tod, the New York banker, who owns 450 acres on the top of Round Hill in Greenwich, whence the Hudson Palisades, twenty miles distant, can be seen. Kenworthy has cherished a grudge against against Mr. Tod, who has refused to pay him $20,000 for the small farm which he occupied on a life lease and which will become the property of Kenworthy's four children when he dies. The Kenworthy family now work it and peddle the produce in the village. Mr. Todd and the Kenworthys have equal title to a right of way over a lane leading to the rear of the Tod place, and a few years ago Kenworthy piled the lane full of stones to keep Tod away. Tod removed the stones and got an order of court restraining Kenworthy from piling up obstructions. Then Kenworthy posted signs which read, "The jig is up." For a year or two afterward Mr. Tod never visited his farm when Kenworthy was around, fearing he might commit some mad act. When locked up Kenworthy said he had coaxed a confession from his wife recently that thirty years ago she had allowed a minister to kiss her. This Mrs. Kenworthy denies.

MAY REVERSE MAINE RESULT.

Corrections in Returns Likely to Give State to "Drys."

AUGUSTA, Me., Sept. 19.—After having completed the tabulation of the official returns on all four questions which appeared upon the ballot at the special election a week ago, the Governor and Council to-night adjourned until Thursday, Sept. 28, when they will meet to consider corrections.

The results as announced to-day were as follows:

On repeal of the constitutional prohibitory amendment: For repeal, 60,487; against repeal, 60,461; majority for repeal, 26.

The State-wide primary system was adopted by a majority of 44,036, there being 65,810 votes in favor of it.

The majority in favor of locating the State Capitol permanently at Augusta was 18,384, and for increasing the debt limit in cities of 40,000 and over the majority was 530.

Attorney General Pattangall stated to-night that the question of the repeal of the prohibitory amendment was still in doubt, and it was his belief that corrections would show a considerable majority against repeal.

At the meeting next week the Council will serve notice of any intended corrections, and will then set a date on which a hearing will be held. The time for receiving corrections will not expire until Oct. 9.

Gov. Frederick W. Plaisted said to-night that corrections would be made in the returns of several towns which might materially alter the result.

JEWELS LOST IN HOTEL FIRE.

Rocks House, Near West Point, Burns and Guests Lose Valuables.

HIGHLAND FALLS, N. Y., Sept. 19.—In the fire that destroyed the $50,000 Rocks Hotel last night no lives were lost. Mrs. Logan, who owned the house, said to-day that all the guests had been accounted for, and that no one was missing among the help.

Most of the guests were at dinner when the fire started. The Rocks was a seven-story hotel, mounted on a rock which partly overhung the river just below West Point. The blaze illuminated the Hudson for many miles, and boats on the river stopped and their passengers witnessed the spectacle.

Among the guests were Mrs. G. S. Bingham, wife of Col. Bingham, and daughter, just arrived from Japan on their way to Jeffersonville, Ind. Mrs. Bingham lost her jewels and $400 in money. Mrs. Dallam, mother-in-law of Major John Bigelow, Jr., lost everything. Mrs. and Miss Finn of Paris lost ten trunks of gowns. Mrs. Hoff of New York City lost a diamond necklace valued at $5,000.

In the fire was a mahogany desk which belonged to Gen. Robert E. Lee, and which he presented to the late Col. Caleb Huse.

DR. W. A. GRAHAM A SUICIDE.

Was a Grandson of ex-Senator W. A. Graham of North Carolina.

Special to The New York Times.

DURHAM, N. C., Sept. 19.—Dr. William Alexander Graham shot and killed himself to-day shortly after returning from a professional call. His sister-in-law heard the muffled sound of the revolver as she left the house, but she took it to be the falling of some heavy object. Returning two hours later she found Dr. Graham sitting dead in a chair with a revolver gripped in his hand and a wound in his mouth.

The suicide is without explanation. Dr. Graham had the largest practice in Durham, owned a beautiful home, and was very popular. He was a grandson of United States Senator William A. Graham, also Secretary of the Navy, in the forties. His father is likewise a prominent lawyer and politician.

Dr. Graham was 36 years of age and leaves a wife and two children.

SUES E. C. BENEDICT AND MAKES CHARGES

Mrs. Heuel Complains That He Manipulates Indianapolis Gas in His Own Interest.

ASKS FOR A RECEIVERSHIP

The Commodore and Associates, She Says, Have Unlawfully Received $500,000 and Are Holding Back Dividends.

Commodore E. C. Benedict, Frank S. Hastings, who married the Commodore's niece; Martin J. Quinn, Edward Beers, and the Indianapolis Gas Company are named in a suit started yesterday in the Supreme Court by Adelaide M. Heuel for herself and other stockholders for an accounting and settlement of the affairs of the gas company. Mrs. Heuel charges that Benedict, Hastings, Quinn, and Beers have unlawfully received money of the company which she believes exceeds $500,000, and she asks that a receiver be appointed for the gas company pending the settlement of her suit.

Mrs. Heuel is the holder of 349 shares of common stock of the company, which is capitalized at $2,000,000, with 40,000 shares of $50 par value.

Mr. Hastings is President of the company, Commodore Benedict its Vice President, and Mr. Beers the Treasurer. Mr. Quinn is a stockholder and a member of the directorate, as are all the others. Mrs. Heuel says that between them they own more than half of the stock of the company, and control a lot more of it, thus having actual control of the property. They predominate, accordingly, in the directorate, and Mrs. Heuel charges that Commodore Benedict caused the Board of Directors to pass a resolution giving power to President Hastings to nominate an Executive Committee of three, of which he should be one, to handle the company's affairs.

In 1905, Mrs. Heuel charges, Commodore Benedict and the others she names, conspired to acquire complete possession of the property, and accordingly commenced to increase the company's bond indebtedness, and attempted to discourage the minority stockholders by passing dividends and striving to reduce the price of the stock so that it might be bought in. Dividends were passed, Mrs. Heuel charges, when the company was well able to pay them, the money being used instead for useless expenditures.

Some of the money went to settle a claim for $250,000 which Commodore Benedict pressed and had settled, says Mrs. Heuel, though it actually was without foundation. She says, too, that Commodore Benedict's brokerage firm made large loans to the gas company at excessive interest, and that his firm charged exorbitant rental for the offices at 80 Broadway, where the gas company has its local headquarters in Commodore Benedict's office. All of the men she names, who are officials of the gas company, are also connected with Commodore Benedict's firm. Mr. Hastings, Mrs. Heuel says, besides being related by marriage, was for years Commodore Benedict's secretary, and is under his control, while Mr. Beers is also related to him, and Mr. Quinn is a business partner.

At the present moment, Mrs. Heuel declares, the gas company has accumulated earnings which could be turned into dividends were it not for the policy adopted by Commodore Benedict and his confrères. She asks accordingly that an injunction be granted restraining them longer from withholding dividends, that an order be issued actually authorizing a dividend, and that pending the settlement of the suit a receiver take charge of the company.

No answer was filed to Mrs. Heuel's charges.

ANNOYER TO WORKHOUSE.

David Salomon, a Furrier, Gets a Five-Day Sentence in Night Court.

Evelyn Burke, a telephone girl of 139 East Seventeenth Street, ran up to Policeman Kahn of the Mercer Street Station last night and exclaimed:

"Come quick, my friend's caught a masher!"

The policeman went to Fourteenth Street and Sixth Avenue and found Pearl Turner, another telephone girl of 398 Summit Avenue, Jersey City, holding tightly to a well-dressed man wearing diamonds.

The man was taken to Night Court, where he said he was David Salomon, a manufacturing furrier of 127 East 109th Street. He and two friends, Louis Schmidt, a contracting cloakmaker with a shop at 65 East Twelfth Street, and David Engler of 15 East 161st Street, the Bronx, a salesman for Schmidt, denied the girls' story. Magistrate Krotel then said:

"I believe the girls. You are a dirty loafer. It is men of your stamp who make the streets unsafe for women at night. It gives me great pleasure to send you to the workhouse for five days."

Salomon begged for leniency, but the Magistrate silenced him with a threat to increase his stay on Blackwell's Island.

MURDERS CONDEMNED MAN.

Oppenheimer, Facing the Gallows, Kills Convict Also About to Die.

FOLSOM, Cal., Sept. 19.—Jake Oppenheimer, under sentence of death for murder, to-day killed Francisco Quijada, also condemned to die, with an iron bar in the corridor of the prison here. The killing was the result of bad blood that has existed between the two men for several months. Quijada wrenched the bar from a prison bucket.

Both men recently attempted to break jail and both were sentenced to hang under a new law which makes it a capital offense for a life convict to attempt to break jail. Oppenheimer has killed two men and figured in several attempted jail deliveries. He has been the most unruly prisoner in the history of Folsom.

"I just wanted to add another scalp to my belt," is the only explanation he makes.

Only a few days ago Quijada informed Warden Reilly that he would meet his fate on the gallows gladly if Oppenheimer were hanged first. "If they hang him first," he said, "I will willingly put the noose around my own neck."

Brooks' Comet Seen Again.

TOLEDO, Ohio, Sept. 19.—Brooks comet, which has been lost to observers since last July, was discovered again to-night by Prof. H. J. Sloctemyer of St. John's College. The phenomenon was plainly visible in the northwest sky between the zenith and the horizon. The comet showed no tail, Prof. Sloctemyer says. He said it looked as if it were traveling toward the earth. The head of the comet, or nucleus, displayed a bright light.

KINSMEN WELCOME EX-CONVICT KIMMEL

Mother Alone Refuses to Admit Identity of Man Once Legally Pronounced Dead.

TELLS OF HIS WANDERINGS

Slugged by Hold-Up Men Thirteen Years Ago Before Being Sent to Prison—Back Home.

NILES, Mich., Sept. 19.—George Alfred Kimmel, believed by relatives to have been dead for thirteen years, arrived at his old home from the penitentiary at Auburn, N. Y., late to-day, and was identified by dozens of former friends and associates. Among those who identified Kimmel was his cousin, Mrs. Harry L. Fox, who opened her home to the wanderer and held a celebration of his strange return.

Despite Kimmel's identification, however, and his acceptance by other relatives his mother, Mrs. Stella Kimmel refused to see him to-night. She remained in seclusion at the home of a friend, while scores of Kimmel's old companions sought him out at the Fox residence. The mother continued to denounce Kimmel as an impostor, who was attempting to deprive her of $25,000 insurance which she held on her son's life.

Kimmel's arrival here was dramatic in the extreme. He was accompanied from Auburn by Harry L. Fox and two other old associates from Niles, who had telegraphed from the East that they were sure of Kimmel's identity. As Kimmel stepped from the train scores attempted to talk to him, but his friends hurried him into a waiting carriage and drove him to the Fox home to see his cousin. Here he was also met by F. M. Cook and Richard Dugan, two of the men who had known Kimmel best in the old days. Both said they were entirely satisfied that Kimmel was not an impostor.

"Let me see your wrist," said Dugan to Kimmel.

"Yes, the old scar is there," continued Dugan, as he made a minute examination of Kimmel's arm, "but I need that verification to know that this man is our George Kimmel and no other."

"I know it is George," exclaimed Mrs. Fox. "I am as certain as that as I can be of anything. I wouldn't have him here unless I were sure."

Ten minutes after Kimmel had arrived at the Fox residence neighbors went in search of the mother to tell her of the identification of the man who claimed to be her son. But Mrs. Kimmel refused to go to the Fox home and continued to reiterate her belief that the man at her niece's residence was an impostor.

After the first flurry of his arrival and identification had passed Kimmel gave a detailed account of his wanderings since he disappeared from Arkansas City, Kan., in 1898.

"As you all remember," said Kimmel, "I left my home in Niles in 1898 to go into business at Arkansas City, Kan. I went to St. Louis from Arkansas City that same year on a business trip. While in St. Louis at that time, I was slugged by hold-up men, and for a long time my memory was quite bad.

"For several years it was with the greatest difficulty that I remembered anything. Things came to me piecemeal, and, strive as hard as I could, I could not remember things in any sort of connected way.

"I must have wandered much while in this condition, and eventually brought up in New York. I have little to say about the trouble I got into there, which resulted in my being sent to prison. But I was not responsible that time, and I do not think that I should be judged for that. I feel better now than I have for any time since leaving Niles thirteen years ago.

"But I cannot understand why my mother does not want to see me. She always treated me well, dressed me in the best of clothing when I was a boy, and sent me through high school. I still hold the greatest love for her, and nothing would be a greater boon than to go back home after all these years of trouble and suffering. Maybe she will change her mind to-morrow. I know it is a shock to her."

Seven years after Kimmel's disappearance in 1898, his mother instituted suit in the St. Louis courts to secure the insurance which she held on his life. A jury returned a verdict in her favor and declared Kimmel to be legally dead. Upon this verdict one company paid Mrs. Kimmel on a $5,000 policy. Another company, which carried a $20,000 policy on Kimmel, however, fought the claim and carried the matter to higher courts. Meanwhile this company directed a country-wide search for Kimmel and finally announced to the court that Kimmel was at Auburn.

Upon this discovery the company informed Kimmel's relatives that no payment would be made on the $20,000 policy. Mrs. Kimmel, however, said she put no confidence in the discovery made by the insurance company, and declared the whole matter was a conspiracy to defraud her of the money.

Kimmel said to-night that he had no plans for the immediate future, but that these would depend upon the attitude of his mother and sister. Meanwhile he will remain as a guest at the Fox home.

BLOOM TO BE A LIEUTENANT.

Young Jew Private Opposed by Col. Garrard Passes Examination.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—Private Frank Bloom, Battery F., Third Field Artillery, whose application for preliminary examination for commission as Second Lieutenant in the army was disapproved by Col. Garrard, Commandant at Fort Myer, has passed his final examination at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., successfully.

Young Bloom was turned down because he was a Jew and son of the post tailor. His mother in some way got hold of Col. Garrard's indorsement, and got Simon Wolf, a Washington lawyer, to go to President Taft about it. The President was indignant and interfered decisively.

President Taft ordered Col. Gerrard reprimanded for the original indorsement, and ordered that Private Bloom have the opportunity to take another examination. He received a furlough for two weeks prior to leaving for Fort Leavenworth, during which time he studied hard in preparation for the examination. Before leaving for the military post he expressed confidence that he would be successful.

The official announcement of the standing of the various candidates who were at Leavenworth with Bloom will not be made for several weeks.

HAVE ENOUGH VOTES TO PASS RACING BILL

Opponents of Measure Absolving Track Directors from Liability for Betting Admit Defeat.

CHARGE THE USE OF MONEY

Belief That Gov. Dix Has Yielded to Pressure and Will Sign the Bill if Passed.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Sept. 19.—As a result of effective missionary work conducted by the race-track interests since the long recess of the Legislature was declared late in July, advocates of the Gittins bill to absolve Directors of race tracks from liability for violation of the anti-betting law were able to-night to declare with every degree of positiveness that this measure will be passed in the Assembly next week. It has already passed in the Senate, though with a bare majority and only with the aid of Republican votes.

Should the bill pass, this would indicate that out of thirty-four Assemblymen who failed to vote when the bill was before the Assembly for final passage late in July, at least twenty-three have been won over by the agents of the race-track interests. In connection with this the opponents of the proposed legislation declare that money has been spent freely by those interested in racing and what goes with it in order to accomplish this result.

In connection with these charges the Civic League, an organization which maintains permanent headquarters at the capital for the purpose of reform legislation and opposing measures detrimental to public morals, prints in the current issue of The Reform Bulletin, its weekly organ, the following letter to the Rev. O. R. Miller, its State Superintendent, from the Rev. Herbert Tinsley of Alligerville, Ulster County:

> July 25, 1911.
>
> Rev. O. R. Miller, Albany, N. Y.
> Dear Mr. Miller: In the course of my duties I called upon the Mayor of Kingston yesterday. In talking over various matters with him he told me that a delegation from Brooklyn, representing the race track interests, recently called on him and offered him a generous sum of money if he would induce Senator Fiero to vote for the Gittins race track gambling bill. To his credit, be it said, Mayor Irwin refused, but rather advised him to vote against the bill. Mayor Irwin said: "All kinds of money is floating around for men who will vote for these bills." Mayor Irwin gave me the names of the Brooklyn delegation which called on him.
>
> As Mayor Irwin is the leader of the Democracy in Ulster County and was at Albany at different times when these bills were being pressed, he evidently has grounds for the above statement.
>
> Senator Gittins charged Mayor Irwin with stealing Senator Fiero's vote from him on the race track bill, and you will remember that Senator Fiero in explaining his vote against the bill said that he so voted at the request of his constituents.
>
> Wishing you continued success, I am very truly yours, Rev. HERBERT TINSLEY.

The Rev. Mr. Miller said to THE TIMES correspondent to-night that the Fiero incident was the only specific instance that had been brought to his attention, but that everything indicated that the race track interests were using money as freely to pass the Gittins bill this year as they did to defeat the Agnew-Hart anti-race track gambling bills in 1908.

"It now looks like the race-track gamblers had us beaten," said Mr. Miller. "They claim seventy-six votes in the Assembly for the Gittins bill, which will probably come up next week. And from my own personal interviews and inquiries with Assemblymen at the Capital yesterday and to-day I greatly fear their claims are true. Some men are going to vote for that bill whom we never supposed would do so. What influence has been brought to bear upon some of them I cannot say, but to others I am confident large sums of money are being offered for their votes."

The claim that the Gittins bill would be passed comes from two sources. Senator Timothy D. Sullivan, who might be presumed to have inside knowledge on the subject, and Assemblyman William M. Martin of Saratoga, whose district is so vitally interested in a revival of race track gambling that he has been compelled to pull every wire at his disposal to promote the proposed legislation, join in the declaration that the bill will pass.

The surmise of the Rev. Mr. Miller that the big bosses of both political parties are equally interested in the passage of the Gittins bill has been amply confirmed. Republican State Chairman Barnes is openly advocating its passage in his local newspaper. To-day it was learned that Tammany Leader Murphy has issued orders to his stalwarts in the Legislature to overlook no trick that might smooth the way for the Gittins bill in the Assembly. The legislative leaders freely admit that the measure will come up with all the prestige of the organization's support. The present attitude of Mr. Murphy has led to a great deal of speculation with regard to that of Gov. Dix.

Early in the session, before the Gittins bill was introduced, members of the Legislature who were in a position to speak for the Tammany leader declared that Mr. Murphy under no circumstances would give his support to this proposed legislation unless assurances could be received that Gov. Dix would sign the bill if it was passed by the Legislature.

Should the Governor veto the bill, it is realized that its passage through the Legislature under the organization's whip would merely bring needless odium on the Democratic Party, for among the people up-State there is no end of opposition to the present attempt to upset the reforms for which Gov. Hughes fought so strenuously. It would also involve the needless sacrifice of many up-State Democrats, for it is freely admitted that three out of every four members from up-State who will vote for the Gittins bill will forfeit by their action any chance they may have of being re-elected.

For this reason it is believed that, despite the repeated assurances that have emanated from men close to Gov. Dix that he would not sign the Gittins bill if it is passed, the Governor may have yielded to the persistent pressure that has been brought to bear upon him by persons interested in race tracks who hold a commanding position in the councils of the Democratic Party in this State. It was on similar representations he was led to sign the Frawley Boxing bill.

FAMILY REUNION IN HOSPITAL

Special to The New York Times.

WINSTED, Conn., Sept. 19.—Charles Battell Loomis, the author and humorist, whose Summer home is in Torringford, near here, celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of his natal day in the Hartford Hospital, where he is a patient, on Saturday, with an informal family reunion.

Mr. Loomis underwent another operation yesterday in an unsuccessful effort to find the real cause of the trouble which has impaired his health for many months.

GERMAN CRUISER GOES SOUTH

Rushed to Pensacola, Where Important Cables Are Expected.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 19.—The German cruiser Victoria Luise, Capt. von Hipple commanding, after a stay of several weeks, sailed for Pensacola this afternoon, leaving the harbor at full speed, as the vessel is due at Pensacola Thursday, where important cable messages are expected.

The Victoria Luise was to have remained here until Thursday, but cable orders changed her plans. The craft was well supplied with coal and provisions before leaving here. Coal and other provisions await her arrival in Pensacola.

TIDE WRECKS A SCHOONER.

Carries the Stella B. Kaplan on Horse shoe Shoals—Crew Escapes.

NORFOLK, Va., Sept. 19.—The four-masted schooner Stella B. Kaplan of Portland, Me., Capt. Dow, from Washington and Norfolk bound to Savannah, with 1,000 tons of coal, was thrown by a strong tide on the tail of the Horseshoe Shoals in lower Chesapeake Bay last night while becalmed and is probably a total wreck.

The Kaplan was attempting to sail out of the Virginia Capes when the wind died out and the strong tide carried her on the dangerous shoals. She settled quickly and her crew of ten men took to the lifeboats. Coming on a buoy they made fast and awaited daybreak when they were rescued and brought here.

FILE GATES WILL IN TEXAS.

Application for Probate at Beaumont Values Estate Above $5,000,000.

BEAUMONT, Texas, Sept. 19.—The will of John Warne Gates was filed for probate here to-day. The application for probate states that the estate will amount to more than $5,000,000. James L. Autrey of Houston, who filed the application, said this amount had been fixed as a mere formality.

Mrs. Dolora R. Gates and Charles G. Gates, wife and son, are named as executrix and executor without bond. To Charles G. Gates is willed $1,000,000, and an annual income of $100,000. There is only one other bequest, namely, $100,000 to the Mary G. Gates Hospital at Port Arthur, Texas. A bequest of $3,000,000 to the Gates Old People's Home at West Chicago, Ill., was revoked in a codicil.

NEWBURG, N. Y., Sept. 19.—The Board of Water Commissioners has instructed the Corporation Counsel to apply to the Supreme Court for an injunction restraining the City of New York, through its pipe line contractors, the Pittsburgh Construction Company and Carroll & Clark, from withholding from the City of Newburg water that ought to be passing to its reservoir for city service. The contractors have dammed up the supply and are using the water for cooling their compressors used in building the Catskill aqueduct.

The encroachment on rights of this city was first discovered when after a long rainfall the small addition to the reservoir was noticeable. The writ will be applied for on Saturday.

KILLED BY FALLING CHAIR.

Police Say It Was Flung from the Twelfth Story of a Mills Hotel.

Henry Dermody, a waiter, living at Mills Hotel 3, 161 West Thirty-sixth Street, died in New York Hospital last night from the effects of a scalp wound and concussion of the brain. Earlier in the day a chair thrown from an upper window of the hotel had struck Dermony on the head.

According to the police, the chair was thrown from a window of Room 1,210 on the twelfth floor. This room, they say, was untenanted at the time. Detectives are working on the case.

About two months ago a man was arrested for throwing a chair from a window of the hotel.

ARREST FOR SELLING OPIUM.

N. B. Smith Said to be Active Agent of Big Traffic in Drug.

Special to The New York Times.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 19.—Carrying three empty suitcases and $3,400 in gold coin in a small satchel Norman B. Smith, wanted in Honolulu on a technical charge of selling opium and believed to be an active member of the opium ring, arrived at quarantine to-day on the steamer Wilhelmina, and was arrested by United States Marshal Elliott. Besides the suitcases, Smith had a couple of trunks, practically empty.

The arrest is the result of vigorous measures taken by Secret Service Chief Wilkie. He says that Smith and his associates have been accustomed to take opium as personal baggage to Honolulu and other places, and return with empty trunks. The money carried by Smith when arrested is said to be the profits of his trip to Hawaii. The Secret Service men think that they have in Smith one of the leaders of an opium ring which is making enormous profits from the traffic in all parts of the country.

WANDER WITH DYING BOY.

School Pupils Sent Home with Him Didn't Know Where to Go.

Joseph McCarthy died at his home in Tenth Street, Elmhurst, L. I., after a short illness on Monday night. He was 9 years old and a pupil in Public School 89, Elmhurst. During the recess hour he is said to have fallen in the cement-covered yard of the school. He was picked up in a dazed condition. When he reached his classroom he was unable to take any interest in what was going on about him, and his teacher sent him to the Principal.

Principal Almeron Smith directed two other boys to take him home. They started out, without any knowledge of his address, thinking that he would be able to direct them. This they found he could not do, and having an idea that he lived near Jackson Avenue they started off with him in that direction. Jackson Avenue is some two miles or more away from where the lad lived, and the boys lost time in taking him home. A friend of the lad met them carrying him along and directed them to his home.

While there are eight doctors in Elmhurst the family was unable to obtain any one of them at once. Dr. Wood finally appeared and immediately called other doctors into consultation. They were unable to revive the boy. One of them said that he thought the boy died of acute indigestion. Dennis McCarthy, the father of the dead boy, said that his son seemed in first-class health when he left for school in the morning. He practiced his piano lesson. The boy's brother and sister are pupils of the same school, and the father seemed to think that they should have been directed to take him home.

TRAFFIC TO ENGLAND FROM IRELAND STOPS

Railway Strike Spreads and the Union Threatens Another National Movement.

ALL DUE TO TWO PORTERS

They Refused to Handle Freight for a Firm Whose Employes Were Out—Volunteer Police Plans.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Wednesday, Sept. 20.—The Irish railway strike, by which the south and west of the island are already practically isolated, last night took on a new aspect, which is arousing the most serious apprehension.

The members of the Executive Committee of the Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants, which directed the recent strike on the English railroads, have gone to Dublin, and last night issued a threat of a national Irish strike.

Seeing that the genesis of the Irish railway strike was the fact that two porters refused to handle timber consigned to a firm whose men were "out," and that in practically all respects the present developments are what is known as a "sympathetic strike," the public is confronted with the threat of a national railway strike for which no direct grievance is put forward by the railway employes. As one paper says:

"The principle for which the Dublin railway men struck is that any body of workmen who may go on strike, rightly or wrongly, are entitled to invoke excommunication upon their employers by the withholding of the ordinary rights of transportation. This portentous weapon is to be placed at the disposal of every man who wants an extra sixpence a week from his employer. The public or its representatives are to be called upon to apply the rigors of the boycott, and in the event of refusal the public itself is to be put to the ordeal of commercial paralysis and contingent starvation."

"Insolent anarchism" is the description applied to this attitude of the Irish railway men by The Pall Mall Gazette, which pointed out in an article published prior to the action taken by the Executive Committee of the Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants that "the nature of their intervention will bear directly upon the claims they advance for recognition of the unions by the companies. If they uphold the theory that the railway system is to be paralyzed in the interests of any obscure dispute that may arise in an external industry, they stamp their whole policy as anarchical and anti-social and themselves as declared enemies of the State."

The Managers of the Irish railways refuse to have any dealings with the Executive Committee of the union. The principal railways refuse absolutely to comply with the demand of the men that they should pick and choose among their customers. They say they are common carriers and are bound by law to forward all goods properly consigned to them; they have no business with quarrels between third parties.

The Times to-day compliments the Government on its resolution to give adequate protection to the companies in the performance of their duty, and calls upon the people generally to demonstrate their determination "to keep the extravagances of the new trades unionism within bounds" by registering their names as special constables, ready to be called upon in any emergency to assist the regular police.

A circular which Home Secretary Churchill has just issued is compared to the steps taken for the enrollment of special constables in 1848, when Chartism was at its height in England and a wave of unrest similar to the present movement swept over Europe. In that year, when revolution, ruin, sickness, and death ravaged the world, the Chartists, who were the Social Democrats of the time, aroused such fears that 200,000 special constables were sworn in in London and placed under the orders of the Duke of Wellington.

"The labor troubles of 1911 have not approached in their danger or severity the great upheaval of 1848," says The Daily Mail in an editorial article, "but they have provided mankind with the same warning against tolerating too carelessly criminal incitements to disorder and have shown the mischief which can be caused by a mere handful of professional agitators."

Lord Claud Hamilton on Monday made sweeping strictures upon unionism in the evidence he gave as a railway Director before the special commission appointed to investigate railroad conditions in England. Even papers which refuse to indorse all Lord Claud's strictures declare that the action the railway men's Executive Committee now asks in Ireland apparently admits of no justification.

DUBLIN, Sept. 19.—The Irish railway strike continues to spread. Declared originally on the Great Southern & Western Railway, it has extended over the Great Northern and the Midland Great Western, thus affecting the three principal railway lines in Ireland.

Practically all traffic to England has ceased, and hardly any freight is being moved in Ireland. There were only two trains into and out of Limerick to-day.

No violence is reported, but troops are guarding the Great Southern & Western lines.

An effort to fill the places of the men who quit work is being made. Forty Scottish strikebreakers arrived this morning and met with a hostile reception from the strikers, who attempted to stampede them. A big police escort routed the attacking party. Another party of strikebreakers from Manchester was met by strike pickets, who persuaded most of the newcomers not to go to work.

The Executive Committee of the Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants tonight adopted a resolution setting forth that unless the railway companies reinstate all the discharged men and cease penalizing them for refusing to handle "black leg traffic," the society will call a national strike.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—The Home Office has issued a detailed circular to the Chief Constables in the Kingdom instructing them how the volunteer police force which it is proposed to raise in each of the large centres of population should be organized.

The force will consist of a registered police reserve in two bodies, the first reserve consisting of men who have previously undergone police or military training and who could be temporarily attached to the regulars, with uniform and pay, and the second reserve, consisting of men registered as willing to serve as Special Constables.

Home Secretary Churchill suggests that this scheme would to a great extent obviate the necessity of calling out troops. He further proposes that in times of strikes it might be legitimate to enroll strikers as Special Constables, because strike disorders, he points out, are for the most part promoted by "hooligans," and the strikers themselves would probably be anxious to suppress disorders which would bring discredit to their cause.

WOMEN HOLD DAY BURGLAR.

Pull Him Off a Fence and Sit on Him Till Help Arrives.

An attempt to rob a flat at 241 State Street, Brooklyn, in daylight yesterday, about half a block away from the Brooklyn Police Headquarters, resulted in the sensational capture of the burglar. The prisoner first gave his name as Frank Meyers, a bricklayer, with no address. Letters and papers found on him convinced the police that his name was Clarence J. Hart, recently of Albany, who lived in a furnished room at 321 President Street.

In trying to escape he was scaling a rear fence, when three women, one of whom he had attempted to rob, grabbed him and sat on him until a fireman of a hook and ladder company across the street and detectives from the Brooklyn Bureau came up.

Mrs. Florence Coyne, a matron in a Fulton Street department store, returned to her home on the first floor of the State Street address for dinner yesterday afternoon in time to find the prisoner rummaging through the bureau drawers in her bedroom. On a table in the front room was piled some bundles containing articles belonging to her, which the thief evidently had prepared to take away. As soon as he saw her he ran through the rooms, with Mrs. Coyne after him. She screamed for help. He jumped through an open window to the rear yard with Mrs. Coyne at his heels. She grabbed him, and after a struggle he got away and made for the fence. Mrs. Catherine Madden and another woman tenant in the building came to Mrs. Coyne's assistance.

Fireman Cavanaugh, standing in front of the quarters of Hook and Ladder Company 60, on the opposite side of State Street, heard the commotion and the cries of the women in the flat across the way. He ran over, and on reaching the rear yard found the three women trying to maintain with difficulty their uncomfortable sitting position on the prisoner. Cavanaugh took charge of him and was about to lead him down the street to Police Headquarters when Detectives Roddy, Cunningham, and Denny came along and relieved him of the job.

The detectives had hardly taken their prisoner in the headquarters building when Mrs. Anna Dunne of 245 State Street, two doors away from Mrs. Coyne's home, reported that her flat had been robbed. She identified two diamond rings and a pin found on the prisoner as her property. Hart was then taken to the Adams Street Court, arraigned before Magistrate Harris on two burglary charges, and held in $1,000 bail on each for examination on Sept. 22.

The police found in Hart's room in President Street jewelry, valuables, trinkets, and clothing valued at $5,000. These articles consisted of several gold rings and pins, six razors, two pairs of opera glasses, ladies' neck chains, a pair of diamond cuff buttons, and ladies' diamond set earrings.

On his person was found a bank book on the German Savings Bank, showing deposits of $200. Clarence J. Hart was the name on the bank book. He also had a gold watch with the inscription "From Clarence to Anna, Oct. 8, '11."

An envelope was found on him with the name of Anna Westock of 412 Seventh Avenue, Brooklyn, on it. It was at first supposed that this woman might be the person of the inscription on the watch. Inquiry at that address found that Miss Anna Westock lived there with her parents and a brother, and also elicited the information that their home had been robbed on Monday. Miss Westock did not know the prisoner. The prisoner also had a letter supposed to be from his mother. It gave the address of 254 Delaware Street, Albany.

GIRL'S BURGLAR PAROLED.

She Consents to Letting Off Young Thief She Captured.

Helen Kleiman, 10 years old, who successfully played detective and captured a burglar who robbed her father's cigar store, consented to his being paroled yesterday by Magistrate Geismar in the Flatbush Court. He was John Mackey, 17 years old.

The girl and her father were in the cigar store, at 136 Fourth Avenue, Brooklyn, when two men entered, and while one of them held the man's hands the other grabbed a box of briar pipes valued at $2.50. Both then ran out. Helen remembered the appearance of the men, however, and after notifying the police started to do a little detective work of her own.

Three days afterward she saw Mackey standing at the corner of Fifth Avenue and Bergen Street. Without speaking to him, she went into a near-by store and called up Police Headquarters. A detective was sent to help her. She stood on the corner watching Mackey until the detective arrived. He arrested Mackey on the charge of burglary. Helen, in court, positively identified the prisoner as the one who had stolen the pipes, and he was found guilty.

Ex-Magistrate Higginbotham, counsel for Mackey, asked that Kleiman consent to a parole. Mr. Kleiman consented, because of the youth of the boy, but Helen was obdurate and insisted on Mackey being punished. Mrs. Mackey, the prisoner's mother, decided to try and make Helen relent, and finally succeeded, after promising that her son should report weekly to Mr. Kleiman, as well as to the officials.

YOUNGEST BURGLARS YET.

One Is 5 and the Other 9—Both Caught in the Act.

Johnnie Bills, 5 years old, of 19 Ainslie Street, and his pal, John Kouchinsky, 9 years, of 450 Keap Street, both of Brooklyn, were in the Children's Court yesterday charged with breaking into the home of August P. Day, a retired coal dealer, at 118 Lee Avenue. They are the smallest offenders that have come to the attention of the Children's Court. They told a straightforward story so far as breaking into the house was concerned, but true to the ethics of the professional burglar they refused to "squeal" on their companions in crime, two boys of about 15 and 16 years, who put them up to committing the offense charged against them.

William Hamilton, an undertaker, and a neighbor of Day, lives next door at 120 Lee Avenue. Yesterday morning he heard noises in Day's house. He knew that Day was away in the country and concluded that burglars must be at work. Detectives Comisky, Brown, and Rief, who came in answer to his summons, found the grating from one of the rear windows forced out of place. As they were about to enter the building they heard the "burglars" moving around. On the kitchen table was piled jewelry, silverware, and cut glass belonging to Mr. Day, all ready to be taken away. The sleuths prepared for a desperate struggle and entered. Glancing quickly around the room they spied little Johnny Bills hiding behind one chair and the other boy concealed behind another.

The detectives learned that two older boys had promised them each $1 for doing the work. The police say the little fellows were instructed how to break into the house.

When the detectives tried to find out who were the instructors of the boys Kouchinsky sneered and said he wasn't a "squealer." The youthful prisoners were paroled in the custody of their parents until Thursday.

ACCUSED OF SELLING PICKLED HORSE MEAT

Made by Schwarz Brothers from Old Animals, or Worse, Government Inspectors Charge.

ALL SOLD IN HOLLAND

Federal Evidence Turned Over to New Jersey, Where Plant Is Located—Conspiracy, Says Schwarz.

Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, Chief of the Chemistry Bureau of the United States Department of Agriculture, has had several Inspectors engaged for four months in elaborate detective work in and about the plant of Schwarz Brothers' Company on the Kearny Meadows outside Newark, N. J. This firm renders fat and exports tallow. E. L. Dunlap, acting chief of the bureau, notified the New Jersey State Board of Health several days ago that the firm was not only doing a business in exporting pickled horse meat, but that it had on hand in its pickling room animals that had died "otherwise than by slaughter," and diseased animals slain on the premises. The State Board promptly went into conference, and yesterday gave out this statement:

> The United States Department of Agriculture has turned over to the State Board of Health of New Jersey certain information which leads the board to believe that Schwarz Brothers' Company of Kearny have been guilty of violations of the food and drugs act and slaughter house license act of this State. The board has turned this information over to the Attorney General of New Jersey and has requested him to take such action in the matter as the law provides.

According to Acting Chief Dunlap's letter, the Bureau of Chemistry heard that the firm had shipped a consignment of pickled horse meat in June, and its Inspectors were put on the trail with an eye to gathering evidence to support a Federal prosecution. The surrendering of this evidence to the State authorities is explained by the statement that the firm got wind of the investigation and made no further consignment. According to Mr. Dunlap, it was Kearny's own health officer who "acquainted" Schwarz Brothers of what was going on.

The Official Charges.

Here is the letter which Mr. Dunlap sent to the head of the State's Pure Food Department:

> United States Department of Agriculture, Bureau of Chemistry,
> Washington, D. C.,
> Sept. 15, 1911.
>
> Dr. R. B. Fitz-Randolph, State Board of Health, Trenton, N. J.:
> Dear Sir: Confirming the bureau's telegram of yesterday, announcing that Inspector Wagner would confer with you in regard to an apparent violation of the State food laws, I beg to acquaint you herewith more in detail of the circumstances, which indicate that Schwarz Brothers' Company of Kearny, N. J., hold in their possession a consignment of horse meat intended for food purposes and adulterated within the meaning of Section 3, Paragraph 6, of the State law. The above firm is engaged in rendering fat and in exporting tallow. The tankage is sold to fertilizer establishments. The meat from which the fat is rendered is obtained by the purchase of dead animals and those live animals which, because of disease, age, or general debility, are unfit for further domestic service and can be purchased for a pittance. On or about June 10, 1911, the bureau was advised that the firm exported pickled horse meat to Holland; that this meat was entered at Rotterdam, and was distributed throughout Holland for food purposes. This information was confirmed by inquiry of the Inspectors, who immediately began an investigation to procure evidence necessary to institute a prosecution under the food and drugs act, in the event that the firm made further exportations.
>
> On or about June 22 Herman Lind of New York obtained an appointment as assistant health officer from the Board of Health of Kearny, N. J. This enabled him to make frequent visits to the packing establishment of Schwarz Brothers without arousing the suspicion of that firm or indicating in any manner that its practices were under Federal supervision.
> Considerable secrecy attended the preparation, pickling, and shipment of the horse meat. While it was generally known by each of the firm's employes that a traffic of this nature was being carried on, not more than two were sufficiently within the confidence of the members of the firm to have full or accurate knowledge of the matter. It was soon determined that satisfactory evidence could not be adduced in any manner other than by having one of the Inspectors enter the firm as an employe. This Inspector Callahan did on July 22. He was engaged for a period of two weeks, part of the time as a driver of the deal (dead) horse wagon, which transported carcasses from Jersey City, Newark, and surrounding localities to the plant at Kearny. The remainder of the time he was working inside the packing plant in various capacities. He gained the confidence of the firm to an extent which permitted him to enter the pickling-room, which is separate, but adjacent to the main plant. He was thereby afforded an opportunity to observe the source of the meat from which the pickled product was obtained and to witness its transportation after the dissection of the animal to the pickling-house.
>
> Not Healthy Animals.
> The Inspector reports and can testify that the thirty-one vats, more or less, now stored in this pickling room, consist in part of animals that have died otherwise than by slaughter; that such lot consists wholly or in part of animals that have died otherwise than by slaughter together with animals slain on the premises, but which were diseased and thereby unfit for food. Inspector Callahan is particularly qualified to give testimony as to the diseased condition of the animals, not only because of minute observations that he was able to make in the capacity of driver to the firm, but also because of his qualifications to recognize disease either in the live animals or by post-mortem examination, on account of the fact that he is a graduate physician and had engaged actively in the practice of medicine for a considerable period before entering the Inspection Service.
> The specific evidence that he can adduce to show that the consignment is composed in part of dead animals centres around the transactions of the firm on the dates of July 26, 27, 28, and 29. On the 26th and 27th he was engaged as a driver, and transported carcasses of dead horses and one cow to the plant. On the 28th and 29th he was engaged inside the plant, and assisted in the transfer of portions of these carcasses, together with portions of similar carcasses brought in by other drivers, to the pickling house, where they were cut up and made a portion of the meat now in pickle.
>
> Corroborative evidence concerning the disposition of these particular carcasses, which can be shown by the testimony of Inspector Callahan to have been animals which had died otherwise than by slaughter, can be given by Inspector Lind, who witnessed the selection of certain quarters by the employe charged with the preparation of the meat, and by Inspector Raynor, who witnessed the work of Inspector Callahan and other employes of the firm in transferring the meat after it had been selected to the near-by house in which it was carved and packed.
>
> From a position near by the establishment of the Schwarz Brothers & Co., Inspector Raynor maintained a constant watch during the period in which this identical shipment was being transferred and can testify that the firm receives on an average thirty dead horses a week and a varying number of live animals, ranging from one to five, the latter of which are emaciated, crippled, or apparently diseased and evidently unfit for food.
>
> At some time in the latter part of August or the first of September, A. E. Geissler, the Health Officer of Kearny, and under whom Inspector Lind held his appointment as an assistant, acquainted Schwarz Brothers of the investigation by the Inspectors. In giving this information it is certain that he apprised them of the contemplated action of our Inspectors in the event that the Schwarz Brothers delivered this consignment for exportation to Holland. There is little likelihood that, under the circumstances, the firm will make an inter-State shipment or an exportation of this product and it is probable, unless expeditious action is taken in the meanwhile, that the product now in pickle will be dumped into the rendering vats. Such a move can be apprehended, I believe, under Section 45 of the State law, which confers confiscatory powers on you.
>
> In transmitting this information for your consideration I beg to assure you that our Inspectors, Messrs. H. H. Wagner, W. H. Callahan, Herman Lind, D. M. Walsh, F. B. Raynor, A. J. McIntyre, and J. S. G. Gallagher, whose addresses are Food and Drug Laboratory, United States Appraiser's Stores, New York City, will appear as State witnesses to support the charge and render all assistance within their power in maintaining whatever prosecution, in your judgment, the facts in the case warrant and the laws of your State permit. Respectfully,
>
> F. L. DUNLAP, Acting Chief.

Conspiracy, Says Schwarz.

Eugene J. Schwarz, President of the accused company, issued a long statement last night explaining the company's position in the matter.

"The article printed in The Newark News is not only a gross libel upon this company," he said, "but is published in the attempt to head off the exposure of a gigantic conspiracy to ruin the Schwarz business, in which a branch of the Beef Trust and a concern in the Fertilizer Trust, Schwarz's competitors, the Government detectives, two newspaper reporters of The Newark Evening News, and several officials are involved. This very morning the President of this company, with its counsel, has been before the United States District Attorney and submitted evidence of this conspiracy, to be presented before the United States Grand Jury. Arrests were made several days ago by the Schwarz people in this matter."

The statement further explains that the company conceived the idea of exporting pickled horse meat to foreign Governments toward the close of last year, because in the course of its regular business of rendering dead animals into fertilizer and other products it had often been called to remove animals in prime physical condition, but which have to be killed because of a broken leg or for other reasons not affecting the health of the animal. A shipment sent to Rotterdam was held up at that port by the requirement that each shipment should bear the inspection mark of the United States authorities, but the company was informed by Solicitor McCabe that the Meat Inspection law was confined to cattle, sheep, swine, and goats, so that he declined to put inspectors on the plant. After appealing to the Minister to the Netherlands Mr. Schwarz went to Europe and was informed that the Government would accept his product on condition that a State veterinary be obtained to make inspections of all animals before they were killed for the process, the process itself, and the finished product. Then, the statement continued, arrangement was made for inspection by Dr. E. L. Baldwin. A shipment of June 27 was so safeguarded, and its fitness for human consumption was certified to at Rotterdam.

Mr. Schwarz then reports the visit, with the local Health Officer and three Government detectives, to whom he showed the whole plant, cut off samples, gave them samples, and in their presence ate a piece himself. After their departure he became ill, and also suspicious that the piece of meat was poisoned. He said that he had in his possession the sworn confession of one man who let two men whom he supposed to be detectives into the pickling house one July night, and who said that they poured the transparent contents of two quart bottles into a barrel there, evidently, Mr. Schwarz concluded, some poisonous or deleterious substance, "in pursuance of a conspiracy to first poison this product and then to seize it on its way to Europe." He added that as soon as these detectives can be got into the jurisdiction they will be prosecuted. He says:

"The department which sent these detectives here has been imposed upon, and the utter baselessness and wickedness of the whole charge will be seen when it is remembered that all these European countries are suspicious of all American meat products, and none is allowed in without elaborate inspection. Therefore if we should ship horse meat unfit for human consumption to Europe the only effect of it would be to lose the shipment, and be forever barred out of that market."

AUTO SMASH ON SHORE ROAD

Three Hurt and Driver Held Until Machine Owner Is Consulted.

A motor car owned by Samuel E. Loveless of 318 West 100th Street and driven by Daniel Malloy of 157 West 108th Street jumped on a turn of the Shore Road between Pelham Avenue and City Island Road early this morning and was wrecked against a tree.

Joseph Murphy of 267 West Sixty-seventh Street, Thomas Kane of 173 West Ninety-eighth Street, and William Donnelly and a man whose name was not learned were thrown out and cut. They were taken to Fordham Hospital by a passing automobile.

Dr. Carey and Dr. Burke found that they had no dangerous injuries and sent them home. Malloy was held, however, under police surveillance to determine whether Mr. Loveless had authorized him to use the machine.

HIS BRIDE A SUICIDE WHILE HE DRANK ON

Charles A. Thomas Back in an Asylum and the Tragedy of His Brief Vacation Revealed.

MARRIED A FAMILY MAID

Cast Off by His Father, He Relapsed, and She, Despairing, Ended Her Life.

It came out yesterday that Charles A. Thomas, only son of Percival Thomas, President of the American Dyewood Company and a magnate in the coloring industry, has again been committed to the dipsomania ward of the Pennsylvania Asylum for the Insane at Norristown, a mental and physical wreck.

At the same time it came to light that young Thomas had only recently married a young Swedish girl who was employed as a servant at his father's home. The marriage occurred while the family was in Atlantic City and without the knowledge of his parents, who supposed that he was safely in the asylum at Norristown.

Young Thomas brought his bride to this city, and for a few days made an effort to find employment, something he had never earnestly done before, according to his friends. But suitable work did not come his way, and one night he returned to his bride much under the influence of liquor. That was the beginning of a complete change in the young man. So startling was the transformation that the young wife, terrified at the prospects the future held for her, took poison and ended her life.

The father said yesterday that his son had been one of his bitterest disappointments. As early as his eighteenth year he developed an abnormal craving for liquor. He is 38 now, and for twenty years he has never been free from the mania. Pleas and pledges alike were vain, and finally he was committed to the asylum at Norristown for treatment.

Got Out of the Asylum.

To the surprise and delight of his parents young Thomas got out of the asylum last Summer, apparently cured. He was welcomed home and once more put on a liberal allowance. It was at that time that he met the young Swedish girl, and began paying attention to her. She was Mathilda Johansen, a trusted maid in the family.

Other servants who had lived longer in the house warned her of the young man's previous history, but the girl, who was only 22 years old, felt flattered and happy at his attentions, and turned a deaf ear to the stories about him.

One day in August young Thomas and the girl disappeared from the Thomas home. They appeared that same day at the house of Henry Heil, 119 East Twenty-ninth Street, inquiring for a furnished room and a kitchen. To Mrs. Heil's demand for references as to their character, she says, young Thomas gave her his father's name, and the young woman showed very proudly a marriage certificate purporting to attest to their marriage that same morning at Atlantic City. The girl also paid $5 on account for a front room and kitchen on the second floor. In fact, Mrs. Heil said yesterday, whenever money was paid thereafter, it was the girl who paid it, and apparently from her own slender savings.

The young woman set blithely to work keeping house in the two small rooms, and Thomas started out supposedly in search of work. Soon it was plain that he had fallen into his old ways, and his drinking speedily put an end to the bridal romance. At last the landlady and the other lodgers began to notice that the joy was fading out of the young wife's face and that she was growing pale and depressed. Thomas's excursions began to be limited to the distance between the house and the nearest saloon.

Wife Takes Poison.

On Aug. 29 Mrs. Heil said he was in a drunken stupor all day. Late that night Thomas, still stupid with drink, came stumbling downstairs crying for help. Heil and his wife ran upstairs. There, fully dressed, across the bed they found the young wife, unconscious, with a bottle of lysol, all but drained, in her hand.

She was removed to Bellevue Hospital where, early the next morning, she died. Meanwhile young Thomas, only half conscious, kept threatening tearfully to end his own life. Once, Mrs. Heil said, Heil and another man, who kept watch over him, had to grapple with him to wrench from his hand the same bottle of poison that had given his young wife relief.

The very day the young wife died there was delivered at the house a letter and package from her parents at Stillwater, Minn., where her father is a farmer. The girl had written to them that she had married the son of a rich man and that she and her husband were very happy. The package that arrived on the day she died was a little box containing a dozen small silver butter knives and spoons, a wedding gift from her parents. The thrifty couple in the letter which accompanied the gift reminded the girl of her plain upbringing, and urged her not to forget the simple ways of her past. Thomas wept copiously as he read the letter. Then, according to Mrs. Heil, he gathered together the silverware and stumbled out of the house to a pawnshop with it.

Thomas became such a nuisance around the place that Heil says he finally ordered him to leave. Two days after the young wife's death he finally went, taking his traveling bag and hers with him. That was the last the Heils saw of him. Mrs. Heil said yesterday that her husband had visited the elder Thomas at his office to collect the money due him for lodging and groceries—some $30—but that he had refused to pay any part of it. He declared, she said, that he had cast his son off, weary of bearing longer with him.

Heil then suggested that something be done to provide burial for the dead woman, but Mr. Thomas would not discuss the matter. The body remained at the Morgue for six days. Then Michael Daly, an undertaker, was notified over the telephone by a stranger to attend to the burial of the body in Mount Olivet Cemetery. Daly and the gravediggers were the only mourners when the body was placed there. The undertaker said last night that the expenses of the funeral were paid by the elder Thomas.

All trace of young Thomas was lost for two days. Then he appeared at his father's Philadelphia office and asked for money. He was detained and removed again to the asylum at Norristown, where he is now lodged.

The father was unwilling yesterday to discuss the case. He said the young man was his only son, and that he had borne with him as long as he could. Of the young Swedish girl he said he knew nothing, save that she seemed to have been a decent girl and to have come from honest people. His son had informed him, he said, that there had been a marriage ceremony. He added that he did not even know what had become of his son since the death of the girl, and that he himself had had no part in putting him in the asylum at Norristown.

SUICIDE'S NOTE OF WARNING.

Pinned to Dying Girl's Dress, It Tells of "Man's Unfaithfulness."

Special to The New York Times.

MILLVILLE, N. J., Sept. 19.—Deserted by a man with whom she had become infatuated, Miss Lameta Cannon of East Millville wrote a note to her brother, pinned it to her dress, and then drank poison. She had been despondent since she was cast off a week ago, and had told a friend that she intended to commit suicide.

In her note she said: "I'm fatally crossed in love, and I hope young women will take warning after I'm gone of a man's unfaithfulness."

Miss Cannon died to-night.

JUDGE GROSSCUP WILL QUIT BENCH

Federal Circuit Judge Whose Opinion Freed Standard Oil of $29,000,000 Fine to Resign.

SEEKS FREEDOM, HE SAYS

Has Been Much Criticised—Reported That an Unofficial Investigation Was Busy with His Record.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Sept. 19.—Judge Peter S. Grosscup of the United States Circuit Court astonished both bench and bar today when he issued a statement announcing that he intended to quit the Federal bench. Judge Grosscup, who has served nineteen years and decided many important cases, who was one of the three Judges who prepared the opinion which relieved the Standard Oil of the famous $29,000,000 fine imposed by Judge Landis, announced that he would send his resignation to President Taft early in October. The reason given by Judge Grosscup for his action is that he "wishes more freedom, not only as an individual but as a citizen" than his position on the bench allows him in a period when so many vital matters are to be settled "not through the courts of law but through the court of public opinion."

While the announcement surprised the general public, it is learned to-night that it was not wholly unexpected by those who have kept in close touch with events of the last few months. It is stated, and apparently with authority, that following the sensational articles in several publications laying bare alleged scandalous conduct on the part of Judge Grosscup in former years, searching and rigid investigation into all his acts while on the bench and prior to it has been under way. While not bearing the sanction of the Government, it is understood to have been conducted by a former Government employe.

Whether Judge Grosscup's decision to retire as soon as possible has any connection with an expected publication of any report of the investigators, is a question which has been raised.

Judge Grosscup denied to-night that criticism of certain of his decisions had had anything to do with his resignation. He said that such criticism, if it had any effect, would only defer his retirement. He felt, he declared, that the absence of adverse comment recently had placed him in a good position to accept the opportunity offered to quit the bench.

Judge Grosscup's own statement, issued by his private secretary, was a typewritten document as follows:

> The Court of Appeals meets on Oct. 1. As soon as matters under advisement can be disposed of, probably the first week in October, I shall send my resignation to the President.
>
> The reason for the resignation coming at this particular time is that if I go into the heavy October session I will have become again a part of the court in cases taken under advisement that might prevent resignation for a year.
>
> The reason for my resigning at all is that I wish more freedom, not only as an individual, but as a citizen. The world, politically, is trying to catch up with the world's radically changed economic conditions. The formative period is approaching. Next year's Presidential election will, I believe, be the last one of the old lines. And the settlement for the future will come, not through the courts of law, but through the court of public opinion. I wish no office—expect never again to hold office—but I wish greater freedom than the bench gives to do my part in this court of public opinion.
> My chief regret in resigning is the separation from my associates—no association between men has ever been sincerer or more friendly—and the separation from the bar of the circuit in the relation of Judge and counsel. There will be times, I fully realize, that deep down in my heart the wish will come that I were back again. I expect, of course, to re-enter the practice of the law—an idle life would be an unhappy one—but to practice law is a not too strenuous way.

Judge Grosscup, who had retired to the Exmoor Golf Club, declined at first to add anything to his formal typewritten statement except to say that he expected to go back to the practice of law.

Later he analyzed the two great political parties to the detriment of his own, and predicted a complete Democratic victory in the next National campaign.

"I predict a great Democratic landslide next year," he said. "I believe a Democratic President will be elected and that the party will control both branches of Congress, as it does now. The Democratic Party is not dealing with generalities, as the Republicans are. The Democrats are dealing with concrete facts. Neither party is founded on scientific lines, but the Democratic Party is more scientific than the Republican. The Democrats are shaping themselves to meet the great questions of the day. The Republicans are avoiding these same questions."

Judge Grosscup has been a lifelong Republican and owes his appointment to a Republican President. Some time ago, however, he made a prediction of Democratic victory essentially like the one made to-day.

Few Judges have been more severely criticised than Judge Grosscup; few have been accused of more things not exactly in keeping with the popular idea of judicial conduct and procedure. Several attempts have been made to force him to resign; even impeachment proceedings have been threatened. He has been charged time and again directly and indirectly with not keeping the ermine of his judicial office spotlessly clean.

One of the principal charges by enemies of Judge Grosscup has been that he is a tool of the big corporations. In support of these charges are cited his reversal of Judge Landis's Standard Oil decision, the ninety-nine-year case, the teachers' tax case, and others. He read the opinion when the Court of Appeals reversed the action of Judge Landis in the Standard Oil case.

When application was made to the Federal Courts to close the World's Columbian Exposition on Sundays in 1893 Judge Grosscup dissented, and ruled that the Exposition should be kept open every day in the week.

It was he who issued the injunction against Eugene V. Debs and other officers of the American Railway Union during the railway strike of 1894 in Chicago restraining the labor men from committing acts of violence, and it was he again who later called upon President Cleveland to send Federal troops to Chicago to preserve order.

Passenger and Ticket Agents Meet.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Sept. 19.—Charles N. Burt to-day resigned as Secretary of the General Passenger and Ticket Agents' Association, in annual convention here, and C. R. Hunter of the Trunk Lines Association was chosen as temporary Secretary. The convention's opening session was a busy one. Hereafter all excursion tickets will be indorsed with ink on either the face or back with the name of the special occasion for which they are issued, if the railroads pursue the recommendations of the association.

AVIATOR IS KILLED IN SIGHT OF 5,000

Louis Rosenbaum Was Using an Aeroplane Another Airman Had Failed to Operate.

NINETY-THIRD FLIER TO DIE

France Heads the List with 36 Victims, One a Woman—Twelve of Them Americans.

Special to The New York Times.

DEWITT, Iowa, Sept. 19.—At the Clinton County Fair, held here to-day, after Louis Rosenbaum, an aviator had flown successfully for twenty minutes, something went wrong with his motor and he was dashed to the earth 600 feet below to his death before a crowd of 5,000 persons.

Rosenbaum made a successful start, and for fifteen minutes cut capers in the air which highly pleased the crowd.

He reached a high altitude and appeared as a hawk swooping about the heavens. Then something happened. The machine did not appear to run as smoothly as it had before, and with a little puff of smoke it turned over. Rosenbaum was unseated and fell. Every bone in his body was broken.

The machine landed in a nearby field a mass of twisted iron and timber.

Rosenbaum was using a Curtiss biplane in which Ludwig, another aviator, had failed to make a flight.

Rosenbaum was about through with his performance, according to the terms of his contract, and would have returned to earth within three minutes after the accident occurred. A sudden gust of wind, which tilted the machine and caused the aviator trouble, is believed to have disarranged the mechanism. He had circled the city and surrounding country and was returning to the hangar when the fatal accident occurred.

Rosenbaum's home is said to have been at Mineola, L. I., N. Y. He has made his headquarters in Chicago while making the larger fairs of the Northwest during the Summer. His record until to-day had been free from accidents. Friends have arranged to take the body to Chicago.

The aviator was 27 years old, and leaves a family.

The death of Louis Rosenbaum brings the roll of those killed in aeroplane accidents up to 93. Since the death of Lieut. Selfridge, the first person killed by an aeroplane, on Sept. 17, 1908, each year has seen an increase in the number of those killed. In 1908 1 man lost his life; in 1909, 4; in 1910, 33, and in the nine months of this year 55 men have been killed. Out of the list only eleven were Americans, Lieut. Selfridge, Eugene Speyer, Ralph Johnstone, John B. Moisant, Arch Hoxsey, Lieut. George E. M. Kelly, William G. Purvis, A. V. Hardie, William R. Badger, St. Croix Johnstone, and J. J. Frisbie. Rosenbaum makes the twelfth.

France heads the list with 36 victims, including a woman, Mme. Deniz Moore, who fell at Etampes, France, on July 21 last. German airmen who lost their lives number 11, while Italy and England have 7 each. The others were Russian, Spanish, Hungarian, Peruvian, Belgian, and Dutch.

AIRMAN FALLS INTO CREEK.

Paul Peck Strikes Tree While Flying Over Harrisburg.

HARRISBURG, Penn., Sept. 19.—Paul Peck, the young Washington aviator, fell 80 feet into a creek while making an exhibition flight near this city to-day.

Peck was making a flight over the city from a park, and while executing some figures came in contact with a clump of trees.

The machine was damaged and Peck fell into the water. His back was slightly injured.

TWO BALLOONISTS HURT.

Harry Blondin of Weehawken Likely to Die, Edward Marsh Injured.

ROCKVILLE, Conn., Sept. 19.—Harry Blondin of Weehawken, N. J., was probably fatally injured, and Edward Marsh, also of Weehawken, suffered serious injuries in a parachute descent from a balloon at the Rockville Fair this afternoon. At a height of 300 feet it was evident that the balloon had not been sufficiently inflated, and Blondin, whose real name is said to be Edward Grosberg, tried to land with three parachutes.

The second parachute failed, and for 75 feet Blondin's fall was practically unbroken. He landed in a cornfield. The Rev. J. L. Smith of Hartford was one of the first to reach the injured man, who suffered concussion of the brain and internal injuries.

Marsh fell only 40 feet. He will recover.

RODGERS TO FLY ON TO-DAY.

Repairing His Aeroplane at Middletown—Mother Begs Him to Quit.

Special to The New York Times.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., Sept. 19.—Cal P. Rodgers, the young aviator who is one of the contestants in the coast-to-coast flight for W. R. Hearst's prize of $50,000, and whose machine was damaged here, expects to continue his flight to Los Angeles to-morrow afternoon at 3 o'clock.

The Wright flying machine was not as badly broken up in his mishap yesterday as was at first believed, and when two mechanicians from the Wright factory at Dayton, Ohio, arrived in this city to-night they said that they had practically everything they needed to make the machine as good as new, with the exception of two propeller blades. These were shipped from Dayton yesterday by way of New York and reached this city at 10:40 o'clock to-night. J. D. Taylor, chief mechanician of the Wright factory, is also on the way to Middletown, and before Rodgers starts to-morrow will go over the rebuilt machine carefully. The machine is at the Orange County Fair Grounds to-night and the mechanicians will work all night upon it.

If Rodgers gets away from Middletown to-morrow afternoon he will try to make Callicoon without stop, a flight of seventy miles, and he may try for Susquehanna, fifty-six miles further.

Mrs. H. S. Sweitzer, the mother of Rodgers, arrived here from Hempstead to-day, and is urging her son to give up flying, but both the aviator and his wife have laughed at her fears, and she was one of the most interested spectators to-night watching the assembling of the machine.

WARD AGAIN DELAYED.

Trouble with Connections of Engine Puts Off New Start Till To-day.

CORNING, N. Y., Sept. 19.—Because of a slight defect in a motor attachment, James J. Ward, the aviator, was obliged to-day to abandon until to-morrow his attempts to continue his coast-to-coast aeroplane trip.

In attempting to start his machine at 4:45 o'clock this afternoon he discovered that the oil connections to his engine were cracked. He expects repairs to be completed sometime to-morrow, when he will try to make Attica without a stop.

Ward descended here yesterday when damage to his feed pipes caused his engine to burn out. Another was brought here by auto and installed.

AIRMAN MAMET'S PLANS.

Will Fly Only Over Land in His Proposed Trip Around the World.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Sept. 19.—Much interest is displayed in the aeroplane trip around the world that is planned by M. Mamet, one of the best known of M. Blériot's racing men.

Accompanied by René Million as a passenger, M. Mamet hopes to accomplish the voyage in eight or ten months, though it may take a year. He intends to start from France, crossing the Pyrenees, then flying along the eastern seacoast of Spain, going from Gibraltar to Northern Africa, and thence flying to Egypt via Tunis and Tripoli. From Egypt the airman and his passenger will take ship for India. Australia, South America, and West Africa are also to be visited. M. Mamet will not attempt to cross the sea except from Gibraltar to Tangier.

It is M. Mamet's idea to give flying exhibitions in the principal places he visits with a view to popularizing French aviation and incidentally paying the expenses of the trip. He declares that he will be very careful and will fly only in fine weather.

DIX FOR HOME RULE IN CITY GOVERNMENT

Governor's Paper Read at Municipal Congress in Chicago Urges Greater Local Powers.

SYSTEM ALMOST A FAILURE

Says Legislature Should Not Have Authority Over Docks, Sewers, Hospitals, or Public Buildings.

CHICAGO, Sept. 19.—A vigorous plea for the emancipation of American cities from the control of State Governments was made to-day at the International Municipal Congress by Gov. John A. Dix of New York, whose paper on "Home Rule for Cities" was read by Charles Logue, Chairman of the Boston School House Commission.

Gov. Dix's paper is in part as follows:

"This gathering of Executives is a most encouraging sign. It must, I think, be conceded that there is a basis of fact in the general belief that city government is the one glaring failure in our American system. The efficiency and strength of our National Government is beyond question. It is admitted that our system of State government has vindicated itself; but nobody can deny that in the administration of municipal affairs through the agency of municipal government there is much to be desired.

"Whatever of failure there may be is due to the refusal of the people to apply to the government of cities the fullest measure of the democratic principle of self-government, or home rule. The Nation is supreme within its own domain, as is the State. But the city is the serf of the State. Instead of a self-governing community the American city is an aggregation of people that in fact are the subjects and the victims of a legislative power outside themselves and greater than themselves.

"There can be no right solution of the problem of city government until it is admitted that the city has an inherent right to be endowed with adequate authority that can be exercised without interference from any quarter to satisfy the rights and meet the needs of the people within the municipality. Local self-government should be as clearly and definitely established as State government or as the rights of the Nation within the lines of the Federal Constitution.

"We have incompetence in City Councils. We have police forces that are demoralized, and city departments and bureaus that are inefficient. How can it be otherwise when the city is treated as a dependency to be controlled and governed in its vital affairs by an outside lawmaking body that can possess little knowledge of its needs and is often careless of its rights and its interests?

"The Legislature of New York State has enacted a law which automatically gives a charter to a city of the second class, and there is being prepared for introduction at the next session of the Legislature in January, 1912, a similar law affecting cities of the third class, so that any village having the required number of inhabitants to be a city of the third class may receive a charter uniform with other cities of that class, wherein is delegated to the people all necessary authority to conduct its municipal affairs entirely on the "home rule" principle, embodying unequivocally the principle that the people shall have the right to spend their own money as they find necessary for the needs of their community, without dictation from any higher authority than themselves.

"This will relieve the Legislature of special enactments for the flushing of streets, the construction of docks, authorizing firemen's conventions, providing funds for the maintenance of a hospital, empowering the city to issue bonds to pave streets, construct sewers, purchase of public buildings, the regulation of salaries of officials, and other matters which seem entirely unwise for a Legislature having representatives from every section of the State to attempt to regulate, thereby diverting its attention from broad principles to devote its time to the consideration of purely local matters."

H. A. Mason, Secretary of the California League of Municipalities, spoke on "Framing City Charters Under Home Rule," and Richard S. Childs of New York urged shorter ballots for use in elections.

McCABE'S TENTH VICTORY.

Retains the Democratic Leadership of Albany at the Primaries.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Sept. 19.—State Committeeman Patrick E. McCabe made a better showing at to-day's primaries than a year ago, and for the tenth time won in the Democratic fight.

For three years he has had Robert E. Whalen as his opponent, and in two-thirds of the towns and wards to-day there were stiff conflicts. By agreement the Cohoes wards paired, thus avoiding any contests. In Albany City Mr. McCabe carried fifteen of the nineteen wards, and in the towns six of the ten. The day's result will give Mr. McCabe 97 to 21 delegates in the City Convention and 173 to 81 in the County Convention.

On the Republican side there were contests in three wards and one country town, but these were simply over organization officers.

BOY KILLED BY AN AUTO.

Run Down Just as He Drops Off a Wagon After Stealing a Ride.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y., Sept. 19.—Stealing a ride on a wagon cost thirteen-year-old Frank McQuillan his life to-night. He was struck and killed by the automobile of Stanley L. Silver, a cloak manufacturer of 10 East Thirty-sixth Street, Manhattan, who was being driven to his residence at Beechmont.

The boy was the son of Daniel McQuillan, a member of the Executive Committee of the Democratic City Committee of New Rochelle. He had been gathering plums on a farm near Scarsdale, and was stealing a ride on the back of a wagon belonging to Robert H. Scott, a feed dealer.

Dropping off the wagon in North Avenue near his home, the boy ran for the sidewalk. The roadway is torn up at that point where a trolley line is laying double tracks. The Silver automobile passed the wagon at that minute and ran the boy down. The body was taken in an automobile to Davis morgue, where it lay for hours before it was identified by the boy's mother and father. Coroner James H. Brennan held an inquest.

As soon as he heard that the boy was dead, Silver ordered his chauffeur, Fred Wrieth, to drive to Police Headquarters. He was later paroled by Coroner Brennan in Silver's custody.

Bail Arranged for David A. Sullivan.

Judge Dike of the County Court, Brooklyn, announced his decision yesterday on the application of David A. Sullivan, former President of the Mechanics and Traders' Bank, and allowed him to change the form of security on his bail bond so as to give $10,000 cash security and a $5,000 real estate bond. District Attorney Clarke had opposed any change in the form of bail.

PEACE TREATY ENDS DRESSMAKERS' WAR

Employers Make Concessions and Quickly Settle the Strike of 10,000 Men.

AN ARBITRATION BOARD

All Differences Must Be Submitted to a New Body Hereafter—"Artists" May Lose in Wages.

Women whose Fall and Winter gowns are Fifth Avenue creations made after the style of imported models from the houses of Worth, Drecoll, and Paquin may now visit their favorite modistes without fear that their orders will be rejected or indefinitely delayed.

An agreement by which the Fall season in tailor made gowns may again reopen, after its week of inactivity on account of the strike of the 10,000 tailors and dressmakers employed in the industry, was arrived at yesterday and ratified by all concerned. Under its terms the employes may not go on strike again within a year, whatever their grievances may be, a permanent board of arbitration being provided to settle all differences.

The strike involved nearly 5,000 men from first-class shops from which the most fashionable gowns in the country are turned out, about 5,000 men from less exclusive shops, and 300 men known as the "artists" of the trade.

The real difficulty in the path of the final settlement came in the meetings of the union, where these "artists" had their say. Instead of getting the union wage of $24 a week working by the piece they have made from $60 to $100 a week during the busy seasons. Most of them were imported from the famous dressmaking shops of London and Paris. Why they should be reduced in pay to the level of the mediocre men in the trade the employers could not comprehend, but they let the union demand go on that score since these men had seen fit to go out with their union companions and stand with them for the leveling of pay. These "artists" made protests in the union meetings against any reduction in pay. They did not want to ratify the agreement drawn up for them by their leaders, but they were howled down.

The employers, who were made aware of this, anticipate that one of the first complaints that will probably go to the permanent arbitration board will be the plaint of these "artists" who will cling to their piecework plan. Several of the larger employers said they would make no protest against the restoration of the former wage scale for these skilled workmen.

Here are the terms of the agreement as finally settled in an all night conference ending at daylight yesterday and ratified at a series of mass meetings held in the afternoon:

On sanitary conditions, a permanent Sanitary Board, composed of delegates from both sides and outside experts, shall have power to issue compulsory orders binding on the employers objected to, the board being organized on the lines followed in the cloak and suit industry since its strike of last year.

On grievances, a permanent Grievance Board is to settle all matters capable of easy adjustment, those on which there is a serious difference being appealable to a permanent Arbitration Board.

Hours of labor are to be limited to fifty per week, instead of fifty-two hours as under the present arrangement. The "right to discharge" is to rest absolutely with the employers, which is a concession from the present plan.

Piecework is to be abandoned in favor of "week work" with a minimum wage scale of $24 per week.

Sundays and holidays are to be allowed to the workers, but the question as to whether they shall receive pay for these days is to be arbitrated.

Pay for overtime is to be fixed by the Arbitration Board, the employers offering 40 per cent. additional, and the employes demanding 100 per cent. additional, with no home work and no overtime work after 8:30 P. M.

There was little disappointment on either side over the terms of the peace settlement. The employes consider it a victory, and the employers declare it only puts on paper the concessions which the employes of the better shops have enjoyed for a long time. Both sides are gratified that the season's work may now be done on terms that will eliminate the possibility of driving the trade away from New York.

It was stated that the permanent arbitration board will be chosen from men of the type of Louis Brandies, Louis Marshall, and Hamilton Holt, while the experts of the board on sanitary control will be selected by Julius Henry Cohen, counsel for the employers, and Meyer London, counsel for the employes. There will be on the board also two members to be nominated by the union and two by the employers.

CHAMPION FOR DR. DOTY.

Journal of Medicine Says Health Officer Is Being Hounded by Politicians.

The New York State Journal of Medicine has this to say editorially relative to the investigation of Dr. Alvah H. Doty's administration as Health Officer of the Port of New York:

"Shall our own Empire State lag in the rear when there is so much good hunting abroad? Perish the thought, and so the pack are in full cry at the heels of the chief sanitary officer of the Port of New York, whose sins are many and must be investigated. His chief offense, to be sure, consists in the fact that he draws a salary and earns it. Somebody else wants it. Therefore nail his skin to the barn door.

"The medical profession of the State is a unit in testifying to his extraordinary efficiency. There really doesn't seem to be any way to get rid of him decently. 'Let's get up an investigation; we can't help finding something,' so barks the pack.

"In politics it is good practice to make a mountain of a mole hill. A gentleman is straightway appointed as Commissioner, who forthwith proceeds to demonstrate his ignorance of the first principles of sanitation and utter unfitness for his task by raising a shocked outcry at certain details of quarantine.

"To be sure, prominent members of the medical profession agreed with the sanitary officer, but he thought he had a hot scent and promptly lifted up his voice to bag his game. We had the Asiatic plague on our threshold. The situation was difficult, even critical. Italy was pouring her surplus population into this country from infected ports. We had every reason to uphold the hands of our sanitary officer, who had for years demonstrated his efficiency to the men who know the doctors of the State of New York.

"However, a few politicians know better, or, rather, don't care anything about the merits of the case nor the people's health. They want the job and the cash. So a faithful and competent public servant is heckled and harried at a time when he is straining every nerve in the discharge of a difficult and dangerous duty. It is of the utmost importance that his hands should be upheld at such a time.

"It is not an issue of local import; it is of National importance.

"And there is but one hand between the knife, the skin, and the barn door. It is to laugh. It is to weep. It is to be ashamed."

The New York State Journal of Medicine is the official organ of the Medical Society of the State of New York.

ASK SUBPOENA FOR GROUT.

Union Bank Investigators Want Gov. Dix to Act.

ALBANY, Sept. 19.—Superintendent of Banks Van Tuyl, with Assemblyman Louis Goldstein, who is assisting in the investigation by the State Banking Department into the affairs of the Union Bank of Brooklyn, called on Gov. Dix to-night and asked him to issue an Executive subpoena for Edward M. Grout, former President of the failed institution, whose testimony is wanted in connection with the inquiry. Mr. Grout has refused to testify. The Governor promised to take up the matter with Attorney General Carmody and decide to-morrow what he will do.

Mr. Goldstein was notified to-night that a committee of the depositors of the bank, headed by Dr. E. J. Rohrer of Brooklyn, will come to Albany to-morrow to urge the Governor to issue the subpoena.

WANT THE OLD TRAFFIC PLAN

Merchants Will Urge a Law Amendment Restoring the Former System.

The Merchants' Association of New York has drafted an amendment designed to exempt the Traffic Squad from the restrictive operations of the three-platoon law, which the present Legislature wrote on the statute books before its adjournment. The proposed amendment has the approval of Police Commissioner Waldo, and it is believed that it will be sanctioned by the city administration, but whether it will be delivered at Albany in time to be passed by the Legislature at the present sitting is another question.

It has been shown, however, that the Traffic Squad could be handled with a little more efficiency under the old arrangement, and the plan of the amendment is merely a return to that arrangement. As it existed before the three-platoon law went into effect it was a highly specialized department of the police service, and its duties differed from those of ordinary patrol duty, particularly in the matter of hours. It is the matter of hours that the three-platoon law renders fixed. It makes the patrolman's day eight hours, no more and no less, and as the police day includes the entire twenty-four, the work must be done in three shifts.

But the regulation of traffic does not call for attention during the entire twenty-four, and to divide the traffic men into three shifts is to provide for one shift with no traffic work to do. So every week one-third of the Traffic Squad is assigned to ordinary patrol duty, and this diversion of their concentration on the traffic work has made it necessary to draw other men from the rest of the force to help out.

Under the old arrangement the men worked ten hours, but they had an hour off for luncheon and had their nights to themselves, and, for the most part, their Sundays. This lent a distinction, a comfort, to their lives, but they lose all that under the three-platoon law, and in having to work eight hours at a stretch there can be no interruption for luncheon.

As at present administered, the squad in Manhattan is assigned in groups to eight precincts. In each precinct, each week, the quota of traffic men is divided into three groups, two of which do traffic duty, with the other on ordinary patrol.

SCHOOL BUDGET FOR 1912.

The Total Amount to be Asked For Will Be $33,010,684.

The Board of Education will have an adjourned meeting this afternoon to receive and adopt the school budget for 1912. It has been drawn and approved by the Finance Committee of the board, and printed copies, several hundred pages each, will be ready for distribution.

The total amount of money asked for to run the schools next year is $33,010,684—$3,750,000 less than was anticipated last week. This is because the Board of Education has decided not to request funds this year for carrying into effect the approved principle of equal pay for the women teachers. This means that no provision for equal pay will be made before 1913.

In explanation, members of the Board of Education say that as legislation, a new charter or the repeal of the Davis law is necessary before the new schedules can become effective, it is useless, without such legislation, to ask the Board of Education for the money. The only hope, therefore, the women teachers have of getting increased pay soon lies in the adoption of the new Charter, for which they are fighting.

The general education fund is estimated at $26,108,149, an increase of $2,117,493 over the appropriation for this year. Out of this fund is paid the teachers' salaries, and the increase requested represents chiefly the normal increase in the teaching force. The required special school fund is estimated at $6,902,535, an increase of $1,870,962 over this year's appropriation. This fund is used to meet janitors' salaries and provide school supplies. The total budget estimate is an increase of $3,988,455 over the sum available last year. It is planned to spend about $2,000,000 next year in repairing old buildings.

STOLE EDWARDS'S COAT.

Police Caught Thief Before Street Commissioner Knew of His Loss.

Henry Braun, who is well known to the police, was arrested at noon yesterday with an overcoat belonging to Street Cleaning Commissioner Edwards over his arm. Not until the police notified him did the Commissioner know that his overcoat had been taken from his automobile, which had been left standing in front of his offices in the Park Row Building.

Detectives Burke, Picco, and Kennell saw Braun at Mott and Canal Streets. They saw the overcoat and asked where he got it.

"It's an old one. I just 'bummed it,'" replied the man, meaning that some one had given it to him.

The detectives saw that the coat was new and discovered the name of Commissioner Edwards in the inside pocket. Braun was locked up at Police Headquarters on a charge of larceny, and the tailoring firm notified. A representative went to Headquarters and informed the detectives that the Street Commissioner had purchased the coat on Wednesday last for $75.

Mr. Edwards was notified over the telephone that his overcoat had been recovered. He hadn't missed it and remarked: "I'm going to call up my friend, Commissioner Waldo and tell him that he has an all right police force."

Braun, who is 50 years old and lives at 225 Bowery, was held in $1,000 bail for the Grand Jury by Magistrate Herrman in Jefferson Market Court.

VINCENTE SABELLA BEATEN.

Father of Kidnapped Boy Gives One Explanation, Police Another.

Vincente Sabella, importer of 869 Broome Street, whose young son, his namesake, disappeared two months ago, is the victim of an assault which, the police believe, was perpetrated by kidnappers.

Sabella was severely beaten on Monday afternoon in the shop of John Gramenti, 506 East Fourteenth Street, by three men. Sabella says he went to the shop to collect a bill, and was talking with Mrs. Gramenti when the three men entered. One hit him with a club, and another struck him over the head with the butt of a revolver. They turned his pockets inside out, and were trying to extricate a roll of bills from his hip pocket when Mrs. Gramenti's screams drove them away. Sabella said that the roll contained $700. Both he and Mrs. Garmenti declare that they can give no description of the assailants. Sabella is in Bellevue Hospital with several cuts on his head. He said he believed the attack was due to the fact that the robbers knew his habit of carrying sums of money.

The police version of the affair is that Sabella was in the neighborhood to keep an appointment with the kidnappers of his son. Sabella communicated with the police when the boy first disappeared, but became disgusted when they obtained no clue and ordered them to keep away from him.

The police say that they have information that Sabella agreed to pay the kidnappers $5,000 in three installments. They say he paid $1,700 a few weeks ago, and went on Monday to pay another $1,700. Their theory is that he had some disagreement with the men he met and that this explains the attack and Sabella's failure to give a description of his assailants.

FIREMEN DEFY SMOKE WITH A NEW DEVICE

A Length of Hose Attaches to the Working Fire Hose and Carries Air to Fighters.

FIREMAN HALLORAN INVENTOR

Worked All Right on First Trial and Commissioner Johnson Expects to Put It Into General Use.

An opportunity to try out a new smoke protector came early yesterday morning when a little blaze started in a cellar at 62 West Houston Street, and with it a new automobile hose wagon, which had just been installed in Engine Company 20, in Lafayette Street, also was tested.

The smoke defier was invented by James D. Halloran of Engine Company 23, now temporarily attached to Engine Company 20. It consists of a length of garden hose, reinforced by spiral wire, and is stretched from the street with the fire hose. The outside end of this small hose contains a screen to prevent foreign objects from being sucked into it while in use. The other end is held by rubber attachments close to the nozzle of the fire hose. Attached to the inside of the small hose are several small tubes leading to a device resembling the nose guard used by football players. It fits securely over the nose, and is held in position by the pressure of the teeth. The operation depends on a simple principle of physics. The high pressure of the stream as it leaves the nozzle of the fire hose creates a temporary vacuum at that point and fresh air from the outside is drawn in through the garden hose to fill it. This air is carried immediately to the nose of the fireman through the little tubes having their origin in the end of the small hose, supplying him with fresh air, no matter how smoke-filled the room may be.

Battalion Chief Helm witnessed the test, which was made by Capt. Biggers and Firemen Saunders and McGrath. They agreed that the device was a success, saying that though the cellar was filled with smoke they experienced no difficulty in breathing. Fire Commissioner Johnson, it is said, has assured Mr. Halloran that if further experiments prove the invention a success it will be adopted throughout the city. Mr. Halloran will be kept with Engine Company 20 for some time yet, because the district covered by that company is productive of cellar fires, which lend themselves particularly to experiments with the helmet. Cellar fires are usually smoky, and on that account difficult to fight.

Halloran's invention was something of a surprise to his fellow-firemen. For months he had been working on something, but they could not guess what. He would shut himself up in his locker room during much of his leisure time, and tinker and draw, but just what he was doing no one could learn. Some of his colleagues thought he must be studying to take the examination for Assistant Foreman, and the mass of papers about his room was supposed to represent his work on possible examination problems.

But Halloran, while not distrusting his associates, thought he had good reason to be secretive. This was not the first time he had dabbled in inventions. Twice before he had worked out useful devices and had had the ideas stolen from him before he could patent them. He thought to stay the slaughter of rural visitors who insist on blowing out the gas, and invented a little apparatus, the prongs of which remained apart while the gas burned, but came together if the light went out without being turned off and caused a spark, relighting the gas. Before becoming a fireman he worked with the Edison Company and with a gas company. While with the latter he devised a method of preventing his company from being cheated on the twenty-five-cent metres.

Before talking about his present invention, Halloran saw that he had the full protection of the United States Patent Office. It is said, however, that when he applied for a patent he learned that a foreigner, a French or an Austian Count, he doesn't know which, had invented a somewhat similar device about forty years ago. This, however, depended for its supply of fresh air on that immediately ahead of the stream of water in the hose, while Halloran's draws from the whole out-of-doors.

Various smoke helmets have been invented, but firemen say they were impracticable, being heavy, complicated, and in some instances covering the entire face. Those who tried Halloran's invention say it will relieve much punishment which firemen have suffered from "smoke-eating."

OBJECT TO ROWDY PORTERS.

Travelers Protest Against Them and Cab Drivers at Pennsylvania Station.

The activities of the public porters, cab drivers, and expressmen operating on the curb around the new Pennsylvania Station have become so offensive to travelers that complaints of their conduct are pouring in on the railroad officials. So numerous have these complaints become that the railroad company has posted placards in conspicuous places warning its patrons that it will not be responsible for the actions of or charges made by these individuals, who are entirely beyond its jurisdiction.

These free lances are not allowed to solicit business in the station, but as a matter of policy public porters who have been engaged elsewhere are allowed to escort patrons as far as the train gates, although under no conditions may they pass through.

The railroad maintains a large force of porters, readily distinguished by their uniforms, to meet the requirements of the public. These porters are under the direct jurisdiction of the corporation, and their actions are in marked contrast to those of the public porters.

COLUMBUS PARK NOW.

Aldermen Discard the Name Mulberry Bend—Hatpin Complaint Filed.

The Aldermen held their first meeting yesterday since the holidays. Alderman Leonard Van Nostrand introduced a resolution to have the city authorities stop certain kinds of public dances, including the "nigger," the "shiver," and the "grizzly bear," on the ground that they endanger the morals of the girls who take part in them. The resolution was referred to the Committee on Laws and Legislation.

Dr. H. Everett Russell of 257 West Seventy-third Street wrote to the board asking that an ordinance be passed limiting the length of hatpins worn by women on the streets and in public conveyances. The letter was placed on file after one Alderman had expressed the opinion that to interfere with women's fashions would be more dangerous than the hatpins themselves.

Alderman A. W. Herbst wanted free salt water baths, open all the year, to be established in connection with the high pressure salt water system for fires. The matter was referred to Water Commissioner Thompson.

The Aldermen voted to change the name of Mulberry Bend Park to Columbus Park.

10,000 SUFFRAGE PARADERS.

That Number Expected to Fall In Line and March Next Spring.

There will be at least 10,000 women in line in the second woman suffrage parade, to be held here next Spring, it was announced at the rooms of the Women's Political Union yesterday, with young women marshals on horseback, under the direction of Miss Dorothy Hazard of Syracuse. A committee to take charge of the arrangements will be chosen this month. Those who have so far accepted appointment are Mrs. John Winters Brannan, Mrs. Julian Coffin, Miss Marian Cruger Coffin, Mrs. R. E. Ely, Mrs. Henry B. Fuller, Mrs. Henry Wise Miller, Miss Frances Peters, Mrs. John Rogers, Jr.; Mrs. Victor Sorchon, Mrs. A. F. Townsend, Miss Katharine Remsen Wells, and Mrs. Edgerton Winthrop, Jr.

A uniform color plan, which was attempted, but without great success, last May, will be carried out if possible for next Spring's parade, and the women marchers may adopt an official parade hat of suffrage colors. Miss Elsie De Wolfe may have charge of arranging the color plan of the procession, the banners, and floats. The first meeting of the committee will be held on Wednesday, Sept. 27, at the rooms of the union, 46 West Twenty-ninth Street.

Mrs. Richard Aldrich, Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, Miss Bruning, and Mrs. W. W. Penfield met Miss Harriet May Mills, President of the New York State Suffrage Association, at the New York State headquarters, 505 Fifth Avenue, yesterday, and agreed to a general co-operation of suffrage societies for the benefit of the cause. They represented the Equal Franchise Society, the Political Equality Association, the Collegiate Equal Suffrage League, and the Woman Suffrage Party with the State organization. Word was received from James Lees Laidlaw that the Men's League for Equal Suffrage would also co-operate.

ORTELERO SUES FOR $60,000.

Damaged by Dougherty's Statements, Says Dismissed Secretary.

James V. Ortelero, former secretary of Deputy Police Commissioner Dougherty, who dismissed him on Aug. 30, has brought suit in the Supreme Court against Mr. Dougherty for $60,000, alleging that the Commissioner has made damaging statements concerning him. The suit is brought on three allegations, on each of which Mr. Ortelero wants $20,000.

Ortelero charges that he was injured by Mr. Dougherty's statement that he couldn't take dictation fast enough and still further hurt by the Deputy Commissioner's added statement, on Sept. 1, that Ortelero had made public some private correspondence.

"I think that the fact that he gave out private correspondence proves he violated his trust," is the exact statement which Ortelero charges Dougherty made and to which he takes $20,000 worth of exception.

His final $20,000 is demanded on the ground that Mr. Dougherty added to his other statements that Ortelero had been guilty of a misdemeanor by his action.

COSTABILE'S PLEA DENIED.

Contention That His Bomb Was Not a Weapon Is of No Avail.

The demurrer which was entered by John Cardone, attorney for Giuseppe Costabile, the alleged Black Hand leader, was disallowed yesterday by Judge Foster in Part I. of the Court of General Sessions. The demurrer was entered last Wednesday, and Judge Foster has had the case under advisement ever since.

It was contended by Cardone that a bomb was not a dangerous weapon, and the fact that Costabile was caught with one under his coat on Sept. 5, he said, did not make him liable to the charge of a felony under the Sullivan law, which went into effect four days before Costabile was taken.

Costabile will be arraigned this morning to plead. If the plea is not guilty the State will move for immediate trial, and it is expected that it will be under way before the end of the week.

The case of Giovanni Rizzo, arrested on Sept. 15 and charged with having fired two bombs in east side tenements, is still being considered by the Grand Jury. An indictment against him will probably be handed down to-day.

The New Covert Coat for Men is at Saks'

¶ Covert is the stellar performer in this year's production of The Overcoat. You may have any one of three different models, but Covert plays the leading role in each.

¶ A Covert Raglan is the smartest looking garment that ever went out in quest of cold weather. Obviously, some men will look even dressier in a short boxCovert. All depends on the man who wears it.

¶ And a 43-inch strapped seam Covert will give distinction to some men who would blush unseen in another model. Buttons through and has a blue-blooded style about it that's admirable.

¶ But, regardless of the model, we suggest a Covert. And regardless of the Covert, we suggest ourselves as being pre-eminently qualified to give you the overcoat you want at the price you want to pay. Let it be a Covert, and let it be now. Let it be anything, but let it be Saks'!

Men's Topcoats at 25.00

¶ To the man who has twenty-five dollars for an overcoat, we extend greeting. We have topcoats just now at twenty-five dollars that ought to be more, and would be more elsewhere if elsewhere knew how to make them like we do.

¶ The fact is, we have excelled ourselves on these garments. They are exceptional values. Silk lined and beautifully finished, they are made of the most desirable fabrics, in the season's most approved models. The assortment is large enough, too, to tempt the man who likes a wide field for his choice.

Auto Apparel for the Chauffeur is a specialty of ours

¶ That is to say, we are no mere handlers and sellers of chauffeurs' clothes, but makers. We do not believe in buying from Peter to sell to Paul. We do believe that the only way to get a thing done right is to do it ourselves. Which explains the superiority of our chauffeurs' clothes and the economy of our prices.

Chauffeurs' Overcoats, in whipcords, box cloths, serges and worsteds. Button-to-neck and convertible collar models. Made with flaring skirt effect for comfort and convenience, and in lines and general finish these coats have a style peculiarly their own.........25.00 to 75.00

Chauffeurs' Suits, for present wear. In these we have the new pleated button-to-neck model, the Norfolk, the semi-Norfolk and the plain effect. Two pairs of trousers with each suit. Materials are whipcords, serges, box cloths and worsteds. Made not only for service, but to contribute to the general appearance of the man at the wheel.........35.00 to 75.00

Chauffeurs' Suits, worsteds and whipcords, one pair of trousers.... 25.00

ODDS THREE TO ONE THAT LAURIER WINS

Reciprocity Opponents Force Issue Upon Employes, One Plant Threatening Shutdown.

SAY THEY FEAR FREE TRADE

Conservatives Still Using Champ Clark's Speeches and Holding Up Annexation Bogy.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTREAL, Quebec, Sept. 19.—There was a slight disturbance to-night at the railroad station when Sir Wilfrid Laurier left for Quebec.

A Bourassa parade with transparencies marched on to the platform at the station, and a scuffle with the Laurier supporters followed. No one was hurt and no arrests were made.

OTTAWA, Sept. 19.—Never since Confederation has this country witnessed such a stirring election campaign as this one, which will be brought to a close on Thursday, and never have the Conservatives put up such a tremendous fight and appealed to the people with greater confidence since 1891, when they swept the country under the leadership of Sir John A. Macdonald in opposition to Laurier's policy of unrestricted reciprocity.

If the present issue were being fought out merely on the question of reciprocity from an economic standpoint, there is little doubt that Laurier would sweep the country from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

The Conservatives, however, whether sincerely or not, have introduced an entirely new issue, and one which they assert to be of greater importance to the people of Canada than the mere question of dollars and cents, namely, whether Canada shall be turned from Great Britain toward Washington if the reciprocity agreement is ratified.

This cry has been raised so skillfully, and the appeals for loyalty to the empire, British connection and commercial union within the empire, carried on to such a great extent that there is no shirking the fact that on Thursday thousands of voters will go to the polls not bothering about larger markets, but with the thought uppermost in their minds of whether commercial union with the United States is more desirable for Canada than trade within the empire.

Neither can the annexation cry be minimized as a vote-getter. Indeed, in many of the Ontario constituencies, as also in certain sections of the Maritime Provinces, which are peopled chiefly by the descendants of the empire loyalists, the annexation bogy has played a dominant part, and many voters who otherwise are in favor of reciprocity have been stampeded to the Conservative side by its use.

In addition to this the Canadian manufacturers have thrown all their influence and power, backed up by a huge campaign fund, toward preventing the agreement going through. Manufacturers who in the past were ardent Liberals have bolted from the party and are now opposing the Government with all their might. They believe that this free interchange of natural products is the thin edge of the wedge which will ultimately lead to complete free trade between the two countries, and acting upon this belief they are fighting as if for their very lives.

The Conservative leaders say that they are absolutely certain that there is going to be a landslide in their favor and that Laurier and reciprocity are doomed to certain defeat.

On the other hand, Sir Wilfrid Laurier has expressed himself on several occasions during the past few weeks as being confident of a sweeping majority. Close and unbiased political observers say that everything depends on the farmer. The hard fighting for the Liberals is in the cities. The hard fighting for the Conservatives is in the counties. That seems to be the report from both parties. It means, of course, that reciprocity is popular with those whom it was specially designed to benefit, and that the outburst of high-tariff activities is heard most in the manufacturinig centres.

The Conservatives hope to reduce Laurier's working majority to such a small number that he will find it impossible to put the reciprocity agreement through. This, they feel confident, would result in a Redistribution bill being brought down, the Government having been forced to the people before the census returns were in, and another appeal to the people would consequently be made. During the past few days detailed reports have been received here as to the outlook in practically every constituency in the Dominion. A careful and conservative analysis of these reports indicate that the Government can, with reasonable assurance, look for a majority of at least twenty after polling day. This will mean a reduction of the Premier's present majority by twenty-five seats.

According to the best and most reliable information available the polling results should show something like the following:

	Liberal.	Conservative.
Maritime Provinces	22	13
Quebec	48	17
Ontario	35	51
Western Canada	17	18
Total	122	99

Liberal majority, 23.

The above estimate is allowing gains for the Conservatives in every province. In making the prediction many doubtful constituencies have been thrown equally into the columns of each party.

In Quebec it allows for a possible net gain of 7 seats for the Nationalist-Conservative combination, including the pro-reciprocity opposition candidates and taking into account the almost certain loss of at least one of the seats held by the Conservatives in the last House. During the past week or so of the campaign in that province events seem to have indicated a waning of the Bourassa influence and a turning toward Laurier.

In Ontario a canvass of the various constituencies shows many Liberal seats in danger. That the Conservatives will make large gains in this province is a safe estimate.

In the West, with reciprocity as the issue, the Liberals hope to make gains, while in the Maritime Provinces, which deal largely with the New England States, and where the agreement is also popular, very little change in the present standing of the parties is expected.

Taken altogether there is little doubt that Laurier will be returned with at least a sufficiently strong majority to warrant the ratifying of the reciprocity agreement. This, it is believed, he will immediately proceed to do, and the chances are that the reciprocity agreement will be in force as early as November, in time to give the farmers of the West an opportunity of benefiting by it in the disposal of this year's crops.

To-day a number of manufacturers suspended operations and ordered out their workmen to hear an anti-reciprocity address delivered in their factory yards. In Ottawa this was done by the E. B. Eddy Company, of which the head is W. H. Rowley, President of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association. The proprietors of a large packing plant stated to their workmen that if reciprocity carried they will have to close down. Notices of a similar character have been issued to workmen by a number of manufacturers in Canada.

Speeches by Champ Clark and other American champions of annexation are being printed in big types on front pages of newspapers. The Liberals are warning the people to "vote for reciprocity and their own pocket," and denounce the annexation cry as a subterfuge to mislead the electors.

A big vote is certain to be polled. Dry weather has continued so long throughout the country that it will scarcely be possible for rains to spoil the roads before Thursday and make it difficult for the rural vote to come out.

Few wagers are being made. The prevailing odds are 3 to 1 that the Government will be sustained, and even money that the Government majority will be thirty or over.

BANK OF ENGLAND RATE.

Increase Regarded as Almost Certain —Not Likely to Hurt Trade.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—With to-day's increase in the rate of the Bank of Germany from 4 to 5 per cent., it is regarded as almost certain that the Bank of England Directors will follow suit on Thursday.

One of the best-known bankers in Lodon stated to THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent to-day that the effect which the advance of the rate in Berlin had had on the London market had been greatly exaggerated, that an increase to 5 per cent. at this season indicated nothing abnormal, that it was in no respect attributable to the Morocco controversy, and that under existing conditions increased bank rates in Berlin and London would not exercise a deterrent effect upon trade.

The same authority ridiculed the renewed assertion by the St. Petersburg correspondent of an American paper, already officially denied, that the Russian Government has been withdrawing funds from German banks. "The Russian Government never had 300,000,000 rubles deposited in German banks," he said, "so it could not withdraw them."

ETNA'S FURY RENEWED.

Fear That Eight Peasants Are Cut Off by Lava—Rescue Impossible.

CATANIA, Sept. 19.—The eruption of Mount Etna, which yesterday seemed to be calming down, to-day resumed its former activity.

It is feared that eight peasants have been cut off by the lava. Shots from their guns, evidently to attract attention, were heard, but no aid could be given, as nobody was able even to approach the spot because of the floods of lava.

HANDS IN $6,686,000 CHECK.

Man Who Presented It at Toronto Bank Held Pending Inquiries.

TORONTO, Ont., Sept. 19.—At the Dominion Bank this morning Fred A. Turner of Minneapolis asked the Cashier if a check for $550 was good. The check purported to be from the Bank of England made payable through the Dominion Bank, Montreal branch. He then told the Cashier he had another for a larger amount and produced one for $6,686,000 made payable to him and signed by John Dodgson.

Turner said that these checks had been given him for a good turn he had done Dodgson, who was also from Minneapolis. They came from Chicago to Detroit together, he said, and there he lost Dodgson. Turner is being held while the police make inquiries. He had three other checks, two for $225 and one for $100.

END OF MOROCCO DISPUTE IN SIGHT

Two French Semi-Official Notes Relieve Most of the Long-Continued Apprehension.

SOME POINTS NOT SETTLED

But Agreement with Germany This Week Is Expected—France's Prestige Increased by Controversy.

PARIS, Sept. 19.—The long period of national anxiety attendant on the Moroccan negotiations is drawing toward a satisfactory conclusion.

The French people have been slow in accepting the optimism which has prevailed in Berlin for several days, and it was only to-day, after a semi-official communequé to the press based on Ambassador Cambon's telegraphic report to the Foreign Office of his interview with the German Foreign Minister yesterday, that sufficient reasons appeared for the conviction that the uncertainty is nearing an end.

The semi-official note, issued this afternoon, says that the negotiations with Germany entered a new stage in the conversation between Herr von Kiderlen-Wächter and Ambassador Cambon yesterday, promising an early agreement.

The note adds that Herr von Kiderlen-Wächter did not give M. Cambon a written reply, but talked over with him certain modifications in a spirit of conciliation. No document was handed over because time would have been lost in transmitting it to Paris and in transmitting the reply to Berlin.

The conversation, the note concludes, makes a satisfactory issue probable, but it would be premature to consider all divergencies as having disappeared. Another interview will take place on Thursday, and it is hoped that by the end of the week the negotiations will have reached a decisive turn.

A second semi-official communication, issued to-night, says that although the question of the economic interests of Germany in Morocco appears to be on the eve of settlement, there remain other disputed points still to be settled. Among these are the questions relating to the Consular courts and the system whereby the legations and Consulates take certain natives under their protection. France desires that Germany shall accept in principle the eventual abrogation of the Convention of Madrid, concerning the question of jurisdictions in Morocco, and that Germany shall not undertake to increase the number of her protégés while awaiting such abrogation.

The French people, particularly the business world, have become weary of the daily agitation, the doubts, rumors, and confusing reports of what was happening or likely to happen. It is the most serious controversy France has had with Germany since 1870, and the unity of the people that has been displayed, the firmness and tenacity of the Government toward a formidable neighbor, with Great Britain always as a friend in the background, are regarded by foreign observers as worth to France the strain and worry that have been undergone.

France's position in Europe, it is generally considered, has been greatly strengthened.

BERLIN, Sept. 19.—A semi-official news agency, referring to the latest negotiations between the German Foreign Minister and the French Ambassador, says that there are German demands of a fundamental character which Germany cannot abandon.

Respecting these, a formal statement was embodied in a letter which was handed to M. Cambon by Herr von Kiderlen-Wächter, but these officials concluded that it was more practical to discuss orally the existing points of difference and try to prepare an outline which would do justice to the views of both sides.

There arose, however, several counter-proposals, which the negotiators agreed to submit to their Governments.

GERMAN LOAN STORY UNTRUE.

Report of French-American Advance to German Treasury Is Denied.

In Paris dispatches printed in New York yesterday it was stated that a group of Paris bankers had arranged to advance cash to the amount of 300,000,000 marks to meet the urgent needs of the German Treasury, which, it was said, had treasury notes to that amount failing due next Monday.

In one version of this story it was said that New York bankers had joined the Paris group in advancing this money, and that 7 per cent. interest was to be paid on the loan.

The substance of this dispatch was cabled to Berlin yesterday by a prominent New York banker, who received from a very high financial authority in Berlin the following telegram in reply:

"Statement of course pure invention. Private discount rate 4¼ per cent.; bank loaning on collateral at about 6 per cent. Paris exchange dropped 17 points. No panic, no failure. Drop in speculative securities trifling, less than one-fifth drop of local quotations."

LOW RECORD FOR CONSOLS.

They Go to 76⅞—Further Fall Expected—Now a Drug in the Market.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—Consols fell to-day to the unprecedented low figure of 76⅞, and a further fall is predicted.

Big holders who are quietly unloading are compelled to scale the price in order to find purchasers, as no one wishes for Consols while so much better interest is obtainable from other securities.

Charged with Theft in Chicago as She Steps Off Train Here.

A telegram to Police Headquarters from the Chicago Chief of Police caused the arrest last evening at the Grand Central Station of a young woman just arrived from Chicago with her seven-months old baby. The telegram said she was suspected of the theft of a gold watch and $15 from Mrs. Bessie Krulish in Chicago.

The woman arrested said she was Mrs. Mary Lord, 20 years old, and said she had "borrowed" a watch and $15 from a friend in Chicago on Monday—had taken the watch and money from a table, in fact—but had meant to tell her friend about it. She said her husband was a hotel clerk, who had preceded her here in search of work.

She was taken to the House of Detention with her baby.

YAMENS DESTROYED BY REBELS IN CHINA

Government Buildings Looted and Burned—Many Persons Killed.

CHENG-TU SAFE SEPT. 15

General There Unable to Spare Troops to Cope with Revolt Elsewhere Until He Is Reinforced.

PEKING, Sept. 19.—The French Legation has received a dispatch from Sui-Fu stating that the Prefect's yamen at that place had been attacked and burned by rebels. Many persons were killed.

The Chinese Foreign Board has received reports of an attack on the yamen at Kia-ting-Fu. Details are lacking.

The board has also been advised that the yamens have been looted in five towns in the neighborhood of Cheng-Tu, capital of Sze-Chuen.

A message from Gen. Chao, commander of the troops within the besieged capital, says he will dispatch troops to the disturbed districts as soon as it can be arranged. He is evidently awaiting reinforcements.

Official advices received by the Government indicate that Cheng-Tu was safe up to Sept. 15.

The Government is pleased that the Hongkong authorities have not permitted the holding of a meeting there by those who are opposed to the railway loans.

Orientals

The Largest Specialty Rug House in America.

The Rug Bugaboo

So involved in mystery Oriental rugs seem to some people that they leave the whole subject alone.

Frequently they do this to their loss.

Because the ocean is vast and mysterious, you should not rob yourself of a trip to Europe.

If you expect to spend no more than $20 or $25 for a rug, we can give you a genuine, vouched-for Oriental within that range.

It will be a rug that WE KNOW ALL ABOUT, too, and will carry the regular Wild's Oriental guarantee.

We do not carry full lines of this weave and that weave at those prices.

To do so would mean throwing on our floors conglomerate bales of rugs—which would vitiate the whole collection.

But in the constant WEEDING OUT of rugs which don't QUITE come up to the average of an assortment at a higher price, they are put in a lower-priced assortment.

Almost invariably Wild's Orientals at these cheaper prices were selected with companions to be sold at a considerably higher price.

Which makes them, we believe, the BEST RUG VALUES obtainable at very moderate cost—far different from a lot bought TO BE SOLD at these lower prices.

When it comes to $100 or $200—or up to $500—without attempting to indicate the desirability of the rugs by their mere names, the versatility of the Wild collection is unique in modern rug history.

Wild's antiques are authentic and their modern weaves conform to every recognized rule by which good rugs are selected by competent judges.

That they are constantly drawn upon by the most prominent architects and decorators in all parts of America speaks for itself.

Moderately priced Domestic Rugs Individually Selected as Appropriate Companions to Orientals.

DR. CRAMPTON FACED DEATH IN THE JUNGLE

Back from the Dangerous Mount Roraima Country, Where Missionary Recently Was Slain.

BODY IN THE CHIEF'S HUT

Indian Guides Kept Information from Dr. Crampton Till He Was Safely Out of the District.

Dr. Henry E. Crampton of the department of zoology in Columbia University and also the head of the Bureau of Invertebrate Zoology of the American Museum of Natural History, who recently made a perilous journey into the Mount Roraima country, during which he explored the wild Brazilian savannas beyond the British Guiana border, arrived in New York from South America on the Royal Dutch Mail liner Coppename yesterday afternoon. Dr. Crampton's journey of exploration was made under the auspices of the American Museum of Natural History, and he said last night that he considered that he had met with rare good luck and that the journey had produced the results that he set out to achieve.

The joy of Dr. Crampton in getting back to New York and his family was so great that he did not have time to give out a complete story of his travels. He did tell enough, however, to prove that his trip was a dangerous one. On at least one occasion his life was endangered, and it was to the loyalty of the Indians from British Guiana, who accompanied him, that he owes his escape from harm of any kind.

When the Coppename arrived yesterday Mrs. Crampton and her little daughter were on the pier to welcome Dr. Crampton. When he saw them he jumped about the deck like a schoolboy, and to one of his fellow-voyagers is said to have remarked that the moment was one of the happiest of his life, for, as he explained, he had doubted on more than one occasion if he would ever see them again.

It was in the little Indian village of Kamaiva-Wong, near the foot of Mount Roraima, that Dr. Crampton was in the greatest danger. After he left there and had crossed the line back into British territory his faithful Indians told him of the dangers he had faced. They also told him why he had been unable to enter the hut occupied by old Chief Jeremiah, the head of the village. In that hut, they said, was the body of Elder Davis, an American missionary, who was murdered by Jeremiah's followers because he had preached that polygamy was wrong. Had Dr. Crampton ever gone into Jeremiah's hut and found out the truth about Elder Davis it is quite certain that he would have had a lot of trouble in getting out of Kamaiva-Wong alive, and his fate would probably have also been the fate of his Indian friends who had journeyed from British Guiana with him.

"On July 1 last," said Dr. Crampton, "I arrived at Georgetown, British Guiana, where I remained a week fitting out my expedition. I assembled my Indians, and in company with Dr. F. E. Lutz of the American Museum of Natural History started into the interior, going up the Demerara River 200 miles and thence into the Essequebo River and up the latter stream for about 200 miles to the magnificent Kaiteur Falls, which are 800 feet high and which are among the grandest and most beautiful scenic wonders in South America.

"At Kaiteur Falls Dr. Lutz left me and then began the journey into the Mount Roraima country. With my Indians I started through the jungle on foot. At Georgetown many persons had told me that the journey was a physical impossibility, and that while several white men had been known to go part of the way, it was not certain they had ever succeeded in making the complete journey. I do not know whether any other white man ever went the whole distance, but I do know that it would be hard to conceive of a harder task than the one that confronted myself and party. The jungle was like a swamp, and so hard was the going that on some days we made only five miles.

"Finally we reached a 4,000-foot plateau, across which we worked our way to the town of Kamaiva-Wong, at the foot of Mount Roraima. As we were going into the town some of the natives came out and talked with my men, and I afterward found out that they told my Indians not to let me know about the murder of a missionary named Davis, an Elder, so I was informed, of the Seventh Day Adventist sect.

"Entering Kamaiva-Wong, I found the town ruled by a chief known as Jeremiah. Not only did Jeremiah rule the town, but he was a man of influence in the surrounding country. Desiring to visit the chief and talk with him about the country, I made several efforts to go to his house, but each time some follower would be in just the right place to intercept me. The intercepter would treat me kindly, but he saw to it that I did not get within Jeremiah's abode.

"When I got back to British territory, my Indian guide told me why I was not permitted to enter the hut. They said that Elder Davis had been shot with a poisoned arrow, his throat cut, and the body dragged through the town to the chief's house, within which it is supposed to have been buried. I did not find out whether he was killed by the men or by the women. The elder had preached to the Indians that it was wrong to practice polygamy, and it was this good advice, I understand, that caused him to be murdered. The widow of the murdered man is in Georgetown, and I understood when I left that an expedition was being organized to go to Kamaiva-Wong and learn all the facts about his death. The British are organizing this expedition because, as I was informed, the elder was last seen alive by white men in British territory."

Speaking of the scientific results of his journey, Dr. Crampton said he had obtained 200 photographs, and that the principal object of the exploration, which was to investigate the small animal life and insects and gather botanical and geological specimens, had been satisfactory.

Dr. Crampton said that he had lost none of his men, but added that one of the Indians had contracted blood poisoning and was seriously ill when he left Georgetown.

Before he left Georgetown Dr. Crampton lectured before the Royal Agricultural and Commercial Society of British Guiana on his trip.

"DOG DONE STOLE HISSELF."

This Plea of Negro with a Record Did Not Save Him from Sing Sing.

Billy, a bulldog with a pedigree and a value placed by his owner, Gustav Miller of 75 East Eighty-first Street, at $500, was the cause of considerable trouble for Arthur Holly, a negro, whose home has been 17 West Ninety-ninth Street, but whose address for the next two and a half years will be Sing Sing prison.

Holly was charged with having stolen the dog from Miller's home and having sold him to Henry W. Simpson, a dog fancier at 22 Cathedral Parkway, for $7.50. Considering that Billy is the son of St. Vincent, Frank Crocker's prize winner, this was a great bargain for a dog buyer. Simpson was not shown to have known the story of just who Billy was, or who owned him, but he recognized him as a valuable animal. Billy's owner was not long in finding him and filing a complaint against Holly. Billy's high value made the charge grand larceny, and the case came before Judge Swann in General Sessions.

Holly told Judge Swann an amusing story of how he happened to have the dog.

"He just followed me, Judge," said Holly. "I was walking along and I came to Mr. Simpson's store. I am very fond of dogs, and so I went in to look around. There I saw Mr. Simpson look down and say, 'Hello, that looks like a good dog. I'll give you $7.50 for him.' I looked behind me and there was the dog, and I looked in front of me and there was the $7.50. I just took the money and walked out. It wasn't exactly stealing, you see. If it was stealing it looks like this dog done stole hisself."

Considering that Holly had a criminal record in three chapters Judge Swann thought Holly's story did not excuse him. Then Holly pleaded guilty and was condemned to two and a half years in the penitentiary.

Runaway Team Kills Child.

A team of truck horses, the owner of which was not identified, ran away in East 143d Street yesterday and struck two little girls who were roller skating on the sidewalk. The horses ran into a tree some distance beyond and demolished the truck. William Hobbes of 416 East 132d Street took the girls to St. Francis Hospital. One of them, Madeline Martin, 8 years old, of 534 East 145th Street, had suffered serious internal injuries, from which she died last evening. Her companion, Margaret Gale, of 430 Simpson Place, the Bronx, had a scalp wound and minor bruises.

BRIBE CHARGES MADE IN HARTFORD SENATE

Lobbyists Accused of Dictating Amendments and Senators Desert Rather Than Vote.

GIFTS MADE TO SENATORS

Loving Cups, Engraved as Presents from the Senate, Paid For by Outsiders—Senator Mahan's Dinner.

HARTFORD, Conn., Sept. 19.—In the discussion of the Connecticut River Company's charter, which had just been passed in the House over the Governor's veto, to-day, Senators left the chamber and refused to come back when sent for by the Lieutenant Governor. Two Senators were accused of having gifts made to them as coming from the rest of the Senators, but which did not.

On the opening of debate Senator Hooker of Hartford offered a resolution to the effect that lawyers and lobbyists in the employ of the Connecticut River Company be excluded from the floor and anterooms. In supporting the resolution Senator Hooker said:

"I wish to voice my disgust at the action of lawyers and lobbyists employed by the company. They have caused Senators to be absent when their case has been in doubt. They walk in and out among us and tell us what to do. Was there ever a State in such disgrace? The able Senator from the Twenty-fifth District [Stiles Judson, Republican leader of the Senate] is above corruption, but he was influenced by them. We all recall the picture a few days ago when these lawyers stood on both sides of him at his desk over there during the debate and dictated the only amendment we are allowed to pass."

At this point the question of no quorum was raised, and Senators sent out into the corridors to bring in absent ones, but the latter refused to recognize the authority of the Sergeant at Arms, and a recess was forced. After recess the Chair was asked to have the doors leading out of the chamber locked, so members would have to remain inside, whereat Senator Spellacy said he would go out, no matter whether the doors were locked or who was standing guard over them, but he was willing to stay until 7 o'clock in order to vote on the matter. A few minutes later the Senator disappeared.

Senator Mahan of New London said that forty-eight hours after the passing of the franchise to the Connecticut River Company it would be sold to parties outside of the State.

On a question of personal privilege Senator Hooker said he wished to say something about the attitude of Senators Spellacy and Barnum. He said that at a recent dinner given by Senator Mahan he was on a committee appointed to buy loving cups and other articles for the officers of the Senate. At the dinner he said it would be recalled that substantial gifts were given to Senators Spellacy and Barnum. Afterward some of the Senators, he said, demanded of the committee the reason for spending money for those gifts. "We explained personally that the committee did not buy those gifts with money collected of the Senators. The gifts were engraved as coming from the Senate. They did not come from the Senators as represented by the contributions. The committee here, as a committee, repudiates that it had anything to do with the transaction."

After a short debate on the charter, adjournment was taken.

THRONGS ON GERMAN LINERS

T. M. Osborne and Gustav Amberg Among the Arrivals.

Four German liners, bringing more than 2,000 cabin and more than 1,800 steerage passengers docked in Hoboken yesterday. They were the North German Lloyd liners Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse and Grosser Kurfuerst from Bremen, and the President Lincoln and the Hamburg of the Hamburg-American Line from Hamburg.

On the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse were Thomas Mott Osborne, President of the Democratic League; Carl von Helmolt, the General Manager of the North German Lloyd in America; Supreme Court Justice Newburger, and Gustav Amberg, the director of the Irving Place Theatre.

Mr. Osborne said he had not kept in touch with the Democratic League, and would not have anything to say about politics until he had found out what had happened while he was away, and had a chance to get in touch with the present situation.

Mr. von Helmolt brought news of another great North German Lloyd liner that the line is to build. He said the new ship would be larger and faster than the George Washington, and that it would be one of the finest in the North German Lloyd fleet. He said the name for the new ship, which will be ready to go into commission in two years, has been selected, but that it would not be made public yet. He intimated that the name would be an American one.

Mr. Amberg said that the Irving Place Theatre would open Oct. 1 with Henry Bender and a Vienna musical company of forty people. Mr. Bender will be followed by Mrs. Padek and a Hungarian opera company, and Mrs. Fadek will in turn be followed by Ernst von Possart, the German tragedian.

MURDERER GLAD TO DIE.

Samuel Hyde Convicted of Killing Wife and Father-in-Law in South Carolina.

ANDERSON, S. C., Sept. 19.—Samuel Hyde, confessed slayer of his young wife and father-in-law, was convicted of murder in the first degree by a jury late to-day after 55 minutes' deliberation following a trial which began this morning. The death sentence of hanging will be pronounced to-morrow.

Hyde was unmoved by the verdict. He said it was a just one, that he was guilty, and expected conviction. He refused to enter a plea of not guilty, but counsel appointed for him did so. His attorney said Hyde was a victim of hereditary insanity.

The crime for which Hyde will hang was committed July 18. He killed his wife as she lay sleeping, shot her sister, and then killed his father-in-law, who attempted to dsarm him.

Crew of Ten Saved from Wreck.

NORFOLK, Va., Sept. 19.—The four-masted schooner Stella B. Kaplan, bound from Portland, Me., for Savannah, Ga., grounded on the shoals in Lower Chesapeake Bay last night. The crew of ten men took to the boats and finally reached Norfolk late to-day. The vessel was laden with 1,600 tons of coal, and is probably a complete wreck.

SHOE MACHINERY MEN INDICTED IN BOSTON

Accused of Violating Sherman Act and Conducting Monopoly by Means of Leases.

FACE FINE OR IMPRISONMENT

William Barbour of New York One of the Directors—Seventy-five Witnesses Examined by Grand Jury.

BOSTON, Sept. 19.—Six prominent business men connected with the United Shoe Machinery Company were indicted to-day by the Federal Grand Jury for alleged violations of the Sherman Anti-Trust act. Two indictments were returned, alleging the maintenance of an unlawful combination and conspiracy in restraint of trade on the part of President Sydney W. Winslow, Vice Presidents Edward P. Hurd, George W. Brown, and William Barbour; Counsel Elmer P. Howe and James J. Storrow.

Messrs. Winslow, Hurd, Brown, Howe, and Storrow are Bostonians, while Mr. Barbour is a resident of New York. All except Mr. Storrow are Directors of the company. Mr. Storrow resigned from the Directorate just before the municipal election two years ago, when he was a candidate for Mayor, but he is the largest stockholder.

The Grand Jury sat for nearly a month considering the evidence produced by seventy-five witnesses who were brought here by special agents of the Department of Justice at Washington from all parts of the country, but especially from New England. The investigation was in charge of United States District Attorney Asa P. French, assisted by Special Assistant Attorney General William S. Gregg and Oliver E. Pagan of Washington.

The indicted officials will be summoned into court within the next ten days to plead to the indictments and furnish bail. The trial will not take place until well along in the Winter, owing to the crowded condition of the Circuit Court calendar.

The penalty provided under the statutes involved is a fine of $5,000 or imprisonment for one year, or both.

According to William S. Gregg of the Department of Justice at Washington, who was present to-day, the indictments charge that the six defendants have been working through the instrumentality of the United Shoe Manufacturing Company in a way to make them criminally liable under the Sherman act.

The second indictment alleges that the carrying on of the business under the merger of three old shoe machinery manufacturing companies, which was effected in February, 1899, was engaging in a combination in restraint of trade, that it was a conspiracy in restraint of the trade of shoe manufacturers, and that the whole transaction was a monopolization of inter-State trade, all of which, it is further alleged, has had "a pernicious effect upon the public."

Mr. Gregg supplemented a synopsis of the indictments, covering more than 100 typewritten pages, with a statement that the prosecution by the Government had nothing to do with an investigation begun by the Massachusetts Legislature last Spring.

The indictments first described the shoe manufacturing business and the shoe machinery manufacturing business as they existed prior to and on Feb. 7, 1899, and then set forth all the facts pertaining to the merger on that day of the three old shoe-manufacturing corporations—the Consolidated and McKay Lasting Machinery Company, formerly dominated by Defendants Winslow, Hurd, and Brown; the McKay Shoe Machinery Company, formerly dominated by the defendant James J. Storrow, and the Goodyear Shoe Machinery Company, formerly dominated by Defendants Barbour and Howe, under the name of the United Shoe Machinery Company, and the subsequent carrying on of the business under that name.

Then is told the story of the oppressive uniform lease provisions, requiring shoe manufacturers to patronize the United Company exclusively upon pain of having all their leases canceled and all the United Machinery removed from their factories.

It is further charged that this process drove other shoe machinery manufacturers out of business and effectually put all shoe manufacturers at the mercy of the United Company.

The company was reorganized in 1905 and subsequently auxiliary companies sprang up in Canada, Great Britain, France, and Germany. That same year the manufacturing of all its shoe making machinery was concentrated in one large factory at Beverly, Mass. The United States Shoe Machinery Company now employes 4,000 hands, who turn out 20,000 shoe machines yearly.

The royalty system, by which the corporation disposes of its machines, allows a shoe manufacturer to lease machines, paying rentals in royalties on every shoe made. A manufacturer may buy machinery if he gets it from the United Shoe Machinery Company, providing he buys his "findings"—such as wire nails and eyelets—from the company. It is claimed that the royalty paid the United Company is about 2 2-3 cents per pair of shoes.

Last year the company brought suit against Thomas O. Plant, a Boston shoe manufacturer, charging patent infringements. Plant sold out his shoe machinery plant and patent rights to the United Company after a bitter fight.

A few months later an independent company—the Bresnahan Shoe Machinery Company of Lynn, Mass.—was also purchased by the United Company.

A State hearing on the matter followed, and Representative Bogue, from the big shoe centre at Lynn, introduced a bill in the House of Representatives providing for a recess committee to begin an investigation in Massachusetts.

At the hearing Louis D. Brandeis of Boston, who has assisted the Government in some of its trust cases, presented a bill, drawn up, he said, for Attorney General Swift, which provided for drastic regulations, prohibition of royalties and leases, with prison penalties for the violation.

Charles H. Jones, President of a large shoe company, in reading the bill at a hearing, declared that if it was enacted into law it would mean the saving of 5 cents on each pair of shoes manufactured.

The order providing for the recess investigation was killed in the House, on the ground that the Government was already conducting an investigation against the Shoe Machinery Company.

SUES POWDER TRUST FIRMS.

Buckeye Company Wants $5,000,000 for Conspiracy and Ruin of Business.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., Sept. 19.—Declaring that conspiracies and illegal methods drove it out of business, the Buckeye Powder Company began suit to-day in the United States Circuit Court for damages aggregating $5,000,000 against the E. T. Du Pont de Nemours Company and more than a score of other members of the Powder Trust. Action was brought under the Sherman anti-trust law, following a decision of United States Judge William M. Lanning dissolving the trust. The capital of the E. T. Du Pont de Nemours Company is $50,000,000.

The bill of complaint alleges that the Buckeye Powder Company was in business from 1903 to 1908, when it was obliged to suspend operations, owing to the methods of the trust. The company alleges it has been spied upon by the powder combination and retarded in business, and finally that its works in Peoria, Ill., were blown up by the trust, resulting in the death of two men. It charges that after the explosion the trust circulated printed matter exaggerating the disaster for the purpose of hurting the Buckeye concern. The latter was finally obliged to sell out for $70,000, which, it alleges, was a nominal sum.

It is claimed that the defendant company sought to make it impossible for the plaintiff concern to get any trade in many parts of the United States and abroad, by inducing consumers to enter into secret contracts. Special prices and others means to work disadvantage to the plaintiff are set forth in the bill.

MRS. HUTCHINS LOSES SUIT.

Publisher's Wife Must Get Along on Allowance of $1,000 Monthly.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—Justice Clabaugh in the District Supreme Court today refused to order an increase in the allowance of $1,000 a month to Mrs. Stilson Hutchins and declined to consider her petition for the removal of W. J. Dante, trustee of the aged publisher's estate. He said he desired to consult Judge Ashley M. Gould, who has heard all the proceedings in the case thus far, before taking action.

W. J. Dante filed his answer to Mrs. Hutchins' petition for his removal, and declared her allegations untrue as to his misrepresenting the amount of mortgages on Mr. Hutchins's property and as to gifts of stock to one of Mr. Hutchins's sons. Dante states that Mrs. Hutchins falsely posed as a "next friend" to her aged husband in the ouster suit, and said her suit was directly opposed to the interest of Mr. Hutchins. He declared her object in the suit was to get money for herself.

Trustee Dante says he was "specifically forbidden by Stilson Hutchins under all circumstances to render any accounts to Mrs. Hutchins or to discuss her husband's business affairs with her."

Denying that Mr. Hutchins is "absolutely helpless mentally," as declared by Mrs. Hutchins, Trustee Dante says he saw Mr. Hutchins last March and they conversed intelligently until Mrs. Hutchins denied him further admittance to the bedside of the publisher.

Block Standard Oil Project.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Sept. 19.—The Standard Oil Company, which proposed to erect two large tanks in the eastern end of the city for the storage of gasolene and kerosene in large quantities, has been compelled to abandon the project for the present because it is unable to obtain the necessary land. Residents protested against the erection of the tanks, and this is believed to have influenced the owners of the land against selling.

CALL KINDLING WOOD TRUST CONSPIRATOR

Government Officials File a Complaint Against It as a Restrainer of Trade.

ATTACK ITS CONTRACTS

Action Taken to Cut Off All Its Trade Pending Its Withdrawal from These.

The Government filed a complaint yesterday in the United States Circuit Court against the so-called Kindling Wood Trust, alleging that it is an unlawful cmbination and conspiracy to restrain inter-State commerce and praying that the defendants be enjioned from carrying it on and be restrained from all inter-State and foreig ntrade till they have withdrawn from the alleged illegal contracts.

The defendants are the Standard Wood Company of 90 West Street, the Shrader Wood Company, the Conway Wood Company, the Long Island Wood Company, the Empire Wood Company, the Keystone Wood Company, the Pennsylvania Wood Company, the Greene Manufacturing Company, Joseph W. Blaisdell, President of the Standard Wood Company and Vice President of the Shrader Wood Company and the Conway Wood Company; Philo C. Blaisdell, Director of the Standard Wood Company; Walter F. Blaisdell, Vice President of the Standard Wood Company; Charles O. Blaisdell, Joseph F. Blaisdell, and Andrew D. Whyte, Directors of the Standard Wood Company; George T. Whyte, Secretary and Treasurer f the Standard Wood Company, the Sharder Wood Company, and the Conway Wood Company; Lillian P. Page, a manufacturer of Passadunkeg, Me.; Joseph Fischer, a manufacturer of Lopez, Penn.; Paul H. Knowlton, President of the Conway Wood Company; W. L. Barclay, President of the Shrader Wood Company; Darwin A. Greene, President, and David J. Greene, Secretary and Treasurer, of the Greene Manufacturing Company, and Malcolm Garabedien, Michael H. Johnson, Thomas Halezian, Jacob Adams, Jacob Avakin, and Peter Gigngigian, and the Independent Wood Company of Cambridge, Mass.

In the complaint is is pointed out that the alleged trust deals in an article of prime necessity to a large part of the people of the United States and that the principal markets of kindling wood manufacturers are the large cities in the East, where "substantially all bundled kindling wood is sold to and consumed by the poorer classes, particularly those living in tenement houses and flats, where they are dependent upon wood and caol for cooking and heating purposes." Bundled kindling wood, it is pointed out, is usually distribted by small merchants, who carry it as a side li and are generally dealers in coal or groceries.

The complaint goes into the method of manufacture and states that most of the lumber used is hemlock, fir, spruce, and pine, and the industry is an important one in the States of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, and West Virginia.

Up to 1898, it is said, the industry grew and thrived with many corporations in active competition. Then on Jan. 12 the Standard Wood Company was formed by the Huntley Kindling Wood Company of South Gardiner, Me.; the Whitefield Kindling Wood Company of Whitefield, N. H.; the Adirondack Kindling Wood Company of Gouverneur, N. Y.; the Pioneer Wood Company of White Haven, Penn.; the Carr Kindling Wood Company of Bowdoinham, Me.; the Penobscot Kindling Wood Company of South Brewer, Me., and the Blaisdell Brothers of Austin and Bradford, Penn., and Carrollton, N. Y. It was incorporated under the laws of New Jersey, with a capital of $1,500,000, and it has since, it is alleged, manufactured and sold more than half the bundled wood used in the New England and Middle Atlantic States, and has had complete control of the business in many of the cities.

The complaint recites that by contracts between the Standard Wood Company and Lillian P. Page, the Shrader Wood Company, the Keystone Wood Company, the Pennsylvania Wood Company, Joseph Fischer, the Conway Wood Company, and the Independent Wood Company the Standard Wood Company and its affiliated cnocerns now control 90 per cent. of the inter-State commerce in bundled kindling wood in the New England and Middle Atlantic States. These provide that the Standard Wood Company shall buy all the output of these concerns at a fixed price.

Moreover, it is alleged that for some time the Standard Wood Company, the Long Island Wood Company, and the Empire Wood Company have fixed the prices and divided the territory in New York and Jersey City s as to restrict competition. It is also charged that the Standard Wod Company has prevailed on certain competitors to abandon the manufacture of kindling wood and to become merely its sales agents, and that other illegal acts have been performed, to the restriction of normal trade.

FOR HOSPITAL REFORM.

President McAneny at Conference Advocates Centralized Direction.

The American Hospital Association, composed of administrative heads of hospitals, physicians, and nurses, commenced its thirteenth annual conference yesterday at the Murray Hill Hotel. George McAneny, President of the Borough of Manhattan, in welcoming the members, criticised New York's divided system of hospital supervision and advocated a centralization of the hospitals of the city. He said:

"We have the sum of $20,000,000 invested in the city hospital plants, and in the corporate stock budget recently $6,400,000 was for hospitals. Provision was included in the proposed new Charter until a week ago for centralizing the control of some of our city hospitals, but an amendment to that provision puts the situation back where it was.

"Objection has been raised to the contagious hospitals being placed under central control on the ground that the police are required to control patients. We do not accept that view. There is no reason why the Health Department should not order commitments, as the result of its canvass from house to house."

Suffragan Bishop Charles S. Burch opened the conference with prayer. Dr. Warren L. Babcock, President of the association and Superintendent of Grace Hospital, Detroit, Mich., said in his annual address that more economy and efficiency in administration are required in hospital management, and he recommended the establishment of a cost system of accounts. He said that it was time that details of hospital construction and equipment were standardized.

There are two interesting exhibits at the conference. One is a "chamber of horrors," as the nurses call it, showing mistakes of nurses, coupled with a list of "dont's" for future guidance.

A much larger exhibit shows the new social service work which is being carried on among the patients in some hospitals, intended to occupy the minds of the sick in some active and practical way and relieve the tediousness of confinement. Nurses are now taught the art of amusing patients, always, however, under the supervision of a physician.

New Novel

The IRON WOMAN

ANY book by Mrs. Deland would be notable. But "The Iron Woman" marks an event in American publishing. It is more than a novel, as we have come to know the word. Mrs. Deland pictures youth—dewy, virginal youth—in all its tenderness and passion, its foolish obstinacy, and generous impulsiveness, with truthful idealism. Her young people are wonderfully attractive in their perfect naturalness. She portrays the elders—people whom life has hardened—with just as deep understanding and sympathy. She has a way of penetrating the outward husk of habit and finding the living heart underneath. As for the story itself—it is difficult to speak of its beauty in terms of self-restraint.

JERSEY CITY SHERIFF TO BE INVESTIGATED

Action in Releasing Prisoners Arrested on Bench Warrants Serves as Entering Wedge.

UNBIASED JURY SOUGHT

Justice Swayze Dismisses One Formed by Sheriff and Will Appoint Elisors to Select Another.

Supreme Court Justice Francis J. Swayze fired the first gun yesterday in what promises to be an unusually bitter political war of the Hudson County "progressives" against the Democratic "Big Six" machine, when he quashed Part I. of the September Term of the Grand Jury and announced that a new Grand Jury would be selected in a few days, and probably in a way in which no other Grand Jury in Hudson County was ever before selected.

Justice Swayze based his act technically on the malfeasance of which Sheriff Kelly, the one-sixth Democratic boss of Hudson County, may have been guilty last Saturday night in releasing four resort keepers who had been arrested and brought to the jail on bench warrants issued by Judge Robert Carey of the Court of Common Pleas. County Prosecutor Garven, who has lined up with Justice Swayze and Judge Carey in their county political reform work, appeared before Justice Swayze in the Supreme Court with witnesses who testified as to Sheriff Kelly's alleged malfeasance. Prosecutor Garven pointed out that in view of the Sheriff's act it was not wise to accept the new Grand Jury, which had been selected by the Sheriff in the last few days, and which was at that time waiting in the courtroom to be sworn in.

After hearing Prosecutor Garven's argument and the testimony of witnesses, Justice Swayze announced that he would quash Sheriff Kelly's Grand Jury, many of whom, it turned out on subsequent investigation, were county Democratic machine members and strong "Big Six" henchmen.

No legal complaints against Sheriff Kelly were formulated yesterday, but it was said in the lofty corridors of the $3,000,000 graft-built County Court House that the next move in the war which Justice Swayze and Judge Carey have started would be the issuance of a warrant charging the Sheriff with malfeasance.

Opening Wedge for Reform.

Politicians said, however, that Justice Swayze's quashing of the Grand Jury had a deeper significance than the mere ousting or jailing of the Sheriff. In the last six months Justice Swayze and Judge Carey have been making a vain attempt to bring to book the men who, as County Building Commissioners, stole millions of Hudson County money in the construction of the Court House, and also the County Collectors who, when Boss Bob Davis died, last Winter, were found to have loaned him thousands of dollars of county moneys with which to speculate in real estate.

The Judges have always failed, however, to get Sheriff Kelly's "carefully selected" Grand Juries to indict the boodlers. Justice Swayze had to dismiss one part of the April Grand Jury last Spring because it would not find any indictments against the Court House Commissioners, and Judge Carey announced from the bench, when he dismissed the other part last Wednesday, that he would have to treat them in the same way because of their failure to indict the County Collector who loaned the late county boss county funds.

Justice Swayze, it was said yesterday, had seized the golden opportunity of Sheriff Kelly's Saturday night escapade to obtain the kind of Grand Jury he and the rest of the reformers of the county want. According to law, while the Sheriff is under suspicion of malfeasance the duty of selecting the Grand Jury devolves on the three Coroners of Hudson County, but these are all Democrats, suspected of "Big Six" affiliations. Justice Swayze's friends stated yesterday that he had determined to follow the precedent set by Supreme Court Justice Kalisch recently in the election fraud cases and appoint two elisors to select a Grand Jury, in pursuance of the old English practice under the common law.

The quashing of the Grand Jury yesterday took place in the Supreme Court of the County Court House. Justice Swayze and Judges Carey and Blair of Common Pleas were on the bench, and Sheriff Kelly, suspecting nothing, led the twenty-four Grand Jurymen whom he had selected into the room and showed them where they were to sit. Prosecutor Garven rose from his chair almost as soon as they were seated.

"I desire to challenge this array," Mr. Garven said. "Two or three days ago a complaint was delivered to Judge Carey charging certain persons with the commission of a crime. Judge Carey issued warrants. The warrants were placed in the hands of the Prosecutor's detectives and served. The prisoners were taken to the County Jail on Saturday night about 12 o'clock, possibly a little after that; the warrants were handed to the Warden who was in charge; the prisoners were booked, and the Sheriff then came in and asked for commitments, and stated to the officers who were then present that unless he had commitments he would discharge the prisoners. There were no commitments filed at the time. One of the warrants had been handed to the Sheriff personally. The Warden had received the other two warrants, and the prisoners at the time had been booked. The Sheriff, not receiving the commitments, opened the jail door and released the prisoners. That I consider a violation of the law; first, that it violates the law on the part of the Sheriff in not receiving prisoners who had been arrested by officers who were authorized to do so by the law; and, secondly, that he voluntarily permitted an escape, and therefore we consider also he violated the law. So that at this time it seems to me that it is the duty of the State to apply to this court to quash this panel. I am prepared to prove those statements."

Evidence of Sheriff's Act.

Prosecutor Garven then submitted in evidence Judge Carey's bench warrants which Sheriff Kelly is accused of having flouted. He also put County Detectives Bennett and Charlock on the stand and had them describe how they had arrested the four resort keepers and brought them to the jail, turning them and the warrants over to Warden Sullivan, who booked the prisoners formally. County Detective Charles Hosford then testified as to the conversation which took place at the jail in his presence between Sheriff Kelly and Justice of the Peace Ransom.

"Sheriff Kelly said to Justice of the Peace Edward A. Ransom, Jr., that he must have commitments other than the two bench warrants or he would not lock up and hold the prisoners," said Detective Hosford. "The warrants were in the hands of Warden Sullivan. One I saw in Sheriff Kelly's hands. As we went through the street the four prisoners, liberated, passed us."

Turning to Sheriff Kelly, Justice Swayze then asked whether he desired to be heard.

"No, your Honor," the Sheriff answered, "only Mr. Hosford says I had the commitment in my hand, but that ain't so. I seen the commitment or the warrant in Mr. Ransom's hand. I asked Mr. Ransom if he would not make out a commitment to protect me. I told Mr. Hosford here I will wait until he could go before Judge Carey, and keep the men there until he came back. I was informed that I would hold myself liable if I held anybody without a commitment. I said, 'I will keep them here as long as you want to. If Ransom don't do it, go to Judge Carey or some other Justice of the Peace, and I will hold them here until you get a commitment.' The statement made is true, only I didn't have the warrant in my hand."

"Is it a fact that the Warden had booked them, as you say?" Justice Swayze asked.

"No," answered the Sheriff, "they were not booked. I believe he was making notes, but not in the book."

Justice Cites Precedents.

Justice Swayze and Judges Blair and Carey then held a whispered conversation, after which Justice Swayze said:

> We realize the extremely serious responsibility that a challenge of this kind devolves upon us, and of course in passing upon it we do not pass at all upon the question of the guilt or innocence of the Sheriff or of his duty in the premises. The only question that is now presented is whether or not there is substantial foundation for the prosecutor's charge. We think there is substantial foundation for that charge; that it is not a mere statement of the prosecutor, but a matter of sufficient seriousness to require an investigation in due course of law. Now, due course of law cannot be had where a charge against the Sheriff is to be investigated, if it is to be investigated, by a Grand Jury of his choosing. The right to challenge the array for an alleged interest of the Sheriff is a perfectly well settled right, and where, as in this case, the Sheriff himself is involved, the challenge is a principal cause of challenge as distinguished from a challenge to the favor.
>
> There are precedents in the books, there are precedents in this State; the earliest one I know of is some thirty years ago in Somerset County, where the Sheriff had put men upon the Grand Jury at the nomination of a man who was to be complained against, and Justice Magie, upon the prosecutor challenging the array, in that case sustained the challenge and quashed the array.
>
> The more recent case in Atlantic County, this year, is familiar to everybody. We think that in this case we must sustain the Prosecutor's challenge and we must quash this array of Grand Jurors. That necessitates, of course, a new venire, and we are not prepared at present to say exactly what course we shall take in that respect. We will confer upon that in the course of the day and will issue a new venire for another Grand Jury.

The twenty-four "quashed" Grand Jurymen, looking very much perplexed, and Sheriff Kelly, wearing his usual imperturbable smile, then filed out of the room.

Prisoners Rearrested and Held.

Three of the four prisoners whom Sheriff Kelly released last Saturday night were then arraigned before Judge Carey. They had been rearrested by Prosecutor Garven's detectives Monday night and had spent the night in the County Jail. Assemblyman Henry Marelli appeared for them. They waived examination and Judge Carey held them for the yet-to-be empaneled Grand Jury in the following bail: Giacamo Pasocello, bartender of Joseph Saletti's café at Cordlandt Street and Plank Road, $750; Luigi Sagaro, proprietor of the "Red Mill," $1,500, and Joseph Dalos, porter at the "Red Mill," $750. Marelli promised to produce Joseph Saletti, café proprietor, whom the County Detectives have not been able to find. His bail will be $1,500.

Sheriff Kelly didn't seem to be much afraid yesterday that Justice Swayze and the "Progressives" would be able to prove that he was not wholly within his rights in refusing to allow the four men to be locked up without commitment papers.

Here are the twenty-four jurymen whom Justice Swayze "quashed":

From Jersey City—James P. Meehan, First Ward, a Democratic Fire Commissioner, leader of the ward, and affiliated with Sheriff Kelly; Otto Simon of the Second Ward, Louis L. Finke, Third Ward, a Democratic Street and Water Commissioner; John J. Walsh, Fourth Ward, Republican; Thomas F. Loori, Fifth Ward; Dr. John J. ACCUSES HUSBAND OF CRUEL SILENCE

First He Yelled at Her and Then Wouldn't Talk at All, Says Mrs. Frieda Perkins.

SCHOOLGIRL WHEN WEDDED

Husband Makes Counter-Charges, but Wife Says She Only Knew William Smith as a Neighbor.

Mrs. Frieda Perkins, who was a Normal School student, 17 years old, and dressed in short skirts with her hair down her back in a braid when she eloped with Bertram Raymond Perkins, a dentist, at 40 East Forty-first Street, with a home in Mamaroneck, has started a suit for separation charging her husband with cruelty. Mr. Perkins denies his wife's charges, and though he has started no counter suit declares that everything was all right in their home until Mrs. Perkins made the acquaintance of a young man of White Plains.

The couple have two sons and a daughter, and since the birth of their eldest child Mrs. Perkins says her husband has been cruel and harsh in his treatment of her. She says he frequently would fly into a rage and shout at the top of his lungs. Mrs. Perkins complains also that her husband spent many of his evenings away from home, and that even when he did come home early he made his presence disagreeable by forcing her to go to bed at 8:30 o'clock.

After July 28 last, says Mrs. Perkins, her husband's tactics were changed, and he refused to speak to her at all. On Sept. 7 she packed up and left with her children for her mother's home. She says she worshipped and idolized her husband, but she couldn't live in a house wtih a man who never spoke.

Perkins in his defense says that if he stayed away frequently in the evening it was to attend meetings of various lodges, all of which he joined with the consent and practically at the desire of his wife, who sought social advancement in this way.

Her intimacy with the young man whom Mr. Perkins does not name, declaring that he does not want to ruin his career, caused Mrs. Perkins to be socially ostracized, says her husband. He declares that she used to meet the young man in the garden, and that they held frequent telephone conversations, always with some passwords, so that they might recognize each other instantly over the telephone.

Mrs. Perkins, on the other hand, named the man to whom her husband objected, saying that he was William Smith, a lawyer of White Plains, whose home adjoined their own; that he was a friend of her husband as well as of herself, and that she only met him as one must meet one's next door neighbor.

Perkins said that his wife had left him, and that her mother, to whom she had gone, was "an ignorant, irritable, and quarrelsome woman." He blamed her for much of his marital troubles.

Mrs. Perkins asked for $150 a week alimony, saying that her husabnd's income was between $1,000 and $1,200 a month. The dentist disputed this, saying that it had been reduced 75 per cent. in the last year, and that he had been obliged to mortgage his automobile, in which Mrs. Perkins charged that he frequently went on long joy rides.

Supreme Court Justice Bijur gave Mrs. Perkins $30 a week and $200 counsel fees.

Men's Shirts and Neckties With a Flavor of Fall

Here and there in the country you see a maple branch with its leaves turned crimson. Men's Neckwear is beginning to turn the same way; and Shirts take on an Autumnal tone—with laundered pleats, taking the place of the soft negligees worn through the Summer.

Such signs of the times are plentiful in the Gimbel Men's Furnishing Store, where the new things are arriving fast. Today we specify—

Russian Corded Shirts, $2.50

The bosom and cuffs of fine imported Russian cords, with fine hair-lined allover stripes in black, blue, brown and purple, on white or colored grounds. Bosom with center pleat, and five knife pleats on each side. Square cornered cuffs. Body of fine, white, corded madras. Decidedly handsome Shirts, with the look of custom made.

Some New English Knitted Ties, $2.50

They will be most effective with the high-cut waistcoats of the season. In two-color combinations, so arranged as to tie a solid color knot, and show a bar of the same color below. A fine, heavy, pure silk.

New Evening Dress Shirts, $1.50

Beginning of the season—now's the time to buy them. Some good ones have bodies of featherweight nainsook—soft, thin, but serviceable; linen bosoms and cuffs. All sleeve-lengths. Perfect tailoring and fit.

JIM BARRY WHIPS JEWEY SMITH EASILY

English Boxer Earns Points in Early Rounds at Twentieth Century A. C.

Jim Barry of Chicago beat Jewey Smith of England last night at the Twentieth Century A. C. in their scheduled bout of ten rounds, and although unable to put him away punished him severely on head and body. In the early part of the battle Smith had none the worst of the affray and gave as good as he received. In the last five rounds Barry found his man almost at will, but failed in many attacks.

During the early stages Smith forced matters and clearly nonplussed the Tom Sharkey "White Hope" by the viciousness of his work, as he landed both hands to the head times out of number, and apparently had a shade during the first three rounds. Later on, however, Barry worked a left hook to perfection, and following his leads with rights to the head and body soon had his man in difficulties and hanging on.

Barry apparently threw away his chance for a knockout during the latter part of the fifth round when both were fighting strongly, with Smith getting quite a beating. In the sixth round Barry was all over his man, using both hands effectively. Smith continually bored in with his head. From this stage on the battle was all Barry's, Smith contenting himself with an ineffectual occasional rush.

In the final round Barry made every effort to put his man away, but proved unable to land the knockout punch. Smith laid in and seemed satisfied to stay the limit.

Barry was around the building early enough to demand a "round up" of the house, after which he announced that he would not go on. Subsequently when he was given to learn that such an action would not find favor in the eyes of the Boxing Commission he changed his mind and appeared in the ring.

The first bout brought out a couple of bantams, Irish Mahone and Young Le Roy, with the latter the winner, knocking his opponent cold with a right on the jaw after 1:50 of the second round. Mahone's head hit the floor with a resounding smash, and for a moment it looked like his neck was broken. He recovered quickly when brought to his corner.

Joe Farren of Boston had a bit the better of Charlie Ward of this city. The latter put his man down early in the first for a count of five, but in the rest of the bout Farrin more than held his own.

The semi-final, although rather one-sided, was a good affair, which went through the scheduled six rounds, and showed Joe Farmer the winner over Harry Thiel. The latter was willing enough, and grew tired early in the battle. He stood the "gaff" well, and only lacked condition.

ATTELL-WELLS TO-NIGHT.

Both Men in Shape for Their Ten-Round Battle in Garden.

Speed is the thing Abe Attell, the world's featherweight champion, is endeavoring to acquire more than punching power for his ten-round bout with Matt Wells, the English lightweight champion, which takes place at Madison Square Garden to-night. It's on the road that Abe says he can perfect the speed, and for this fight more than any other he has taken long spins.

"This fello, Wells," says Attell, "is a big, strong fellow. In his bout with Knockout Brown he showed that there is little, if anything, that he doesn't know about boxing. He is clever, can stand the gaff, and has a good punch. To outbox him is my aim, and I'll be satisfied if I can get the popular decision over him. I want speed for this bout and I can get more of that in road work than in a gymnasium. Every morning I run about ten miles, and after each day's spin I feel that I get nearer to my best form. Of course boxing is all right, too. It makes one's judgment of distance good. Due to what work I have engaged in for this fight with Wells, I believe I am just as fast as I ever was in my life. Fighting Englishmen has been a sort of vocation with me for the past few years, and I have yet to find one who can best their Uncle Abraham. I have conceded weight to every one of them with the exception of Owen Moran, and I'm still here looking for more of them. I just look to put Mr. Wells on my list of victims.

"The reason I will try to win on points rather than try to knock out Wells, is because he is bigger and will have some advantage over me in the matter of weight. I'll take no chances with him unless I can get him to a point where he is almost helpless, and maybe then I would try to put him to sleep. I weigh about 125 pounds now and will try to get a little bigger before the battle, so as to make Wells's advantage as small as possible."

"PAT" POWERS FINED $114.

Fight Promoter Defaults in Case Charging Violation of Fire Laws.

Fire Commissioner Johnson announced yesterday that he had been informed of the outcome of the civil suit against Patrick F. Powers, lessee and manager in connection with the "Knockout" Brown-Matt Wells boxing bout, that took place in Madison Square Garden Aug. 30. Two violations of Fire Department regulations were filed against the Madison Square Garden Athletic Club for permitting standees in two aisles on the Twenty-sixth Street side of the Garden that night.

Powers was summoned to appear in Justice Sinnott's Fourth District Municipal Court, but he failed. He was fined $50 on each case and $7 costs on each, making a total fine of $114. The Commissioner said the fines went by default, Powers not appearing.

These are the first cases of litigation of which a settlement has been had under the new State boxing law.

DIX TOO BUSY TO SEE O'NEIL.

Governor Postpones Conference with Boxing Commissioner Until To-morrow.

ALBANY, Sept. 19.—State Athletic Commissioner Frank S. O'Neil of New York came here to-day to confer with Gov. Dix regarding the Madison Square Athletic Club controversy and other matters, but pressure of business forced the Governor to adjourn the conference until Thursday.

Commissioner O'Neil to-day inspected the quarters of the Knickerbocker Athletic Club in a local theatre, to ascertain if they met with the requirements of the law. The club's application for a license has not been granted because it was said to be "faulty."

Nelson Gives Nixon a Beating.

BOSTON, Sept. 19.—Battling Nelson, the former lightweight champion of the world, hammered his way to victory in his bout with Billy Nixon of Cambridge at the Armory A. A. to-night, the referee stopping the fight in the tenth round of a scheduled twelve-round contest. For seven periods Nixon, blinded by the swings of the former world's champion, fought pluckily on and received a terrible battering. Nelson forced the battle, having the lead in the eight rounds, Nixon gaining two rounds in the earlier part of the engagement. The Dane did the greater part of his damage in in-fighting.

Brown and Ginty Matched.

Knockout Brown, the east side lightweight, and Tommy Ginty of Scranton, were matched last night for a ten-round bout before the Twentieth Century Athletic Club at the St. Nicholas Rink on Tuesday, Oct. 3. The match is the outcome of considerable discussion regarding the result of the six-round bout between these boys at Scranton on the afternoon of July 4. Newspaper reports of the bout differed considerably, and M. J. Pike, Ginty's manager, has since been trying to arrange a return match.

Want to See Houck Win.

There will be a large delegation of Philadelphians at the National Sporting Club to-morrow night to root for Leo Houck in his bout with Frank Mantell. Houck is one of the best middleweights around, and would probably have been on top of the heap had it not been necessary to abandon boxing last Spring to enable him to fill a baseball engagement in the Tri-State League. Houck possesses all the championship requisites. He is a good boxer and hits hard.

FIGHT MAY BE ABANDONED.

Strong Opposition to Johnson-Wells Bout in London Developed.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—The feeling against the proposed Johnson-Wells boxing contest has gathered such force that it probably will be abandoned or stopped by the Government. The Archbishop of Canterbury has written to the Home Office urging that action be taken to suppress the contest, and this has served as a focus for adverse opinion. Nine Bishops and many leading religious men, the Lord Mayors of Manchester, Liverpool and other big cities, and leading sportsmen like Lord Lonsdale, Lord Kinnacaid, and Lord Harris have joined in condemning the match, while The Telegraph, The Chronicle, and other papers have followed The Times in urging the Government not to permit the contest.

The Rev. F. B. Meyer, who was one of the original opponents of the match, has offered to raise a public fund to reimburse the promoters in the amount of their loss if the fight be abandoned.

Denning Outpoints Billy West.

Two local welterweights, Billy West and Jack Denning of the west side, fought a clever ten-round session last night in the final bout at Brown's Gymnasium, but the early advantage gained by Denning entitled him to the honors. It was a slashing contest from the start, but Denning dazzled his opponent with clever left hand jabs, which were too numerous to count in the first five rounds and with the exception of the initial session was clearly entitled to the honors.

West for some reason could not get started properly and had to take the clever jabbing of Denning without hardly a chance to land. The westsider relied entirely on his jabbing to carry him in front and kept right after West from the start of the round dancing in and scoring from both sides.

In the fifth round West's mouth began to bleed after a stinging jab on the upper lip and then Denning showed some good body work and had West in bad shape. He tried hard to quit at this stage, but the crowd would not have it and he set out in earnest to fight back. The sixth, seventh, and eighth rounds all went to Denning, but in the last two sessions West shows a great flash and appeared to take on a new lease of life, fighting back in whirlwind fashion. He more than met the blows of Denning and came rushing in from the start, getting in some good body punches on the ribs and kidneys, which slowed the west sider up. Both fought hard in the last round, but West started too late to even up the early lead of Denning.

Twentieth Century's Next Bout.

Al Ketchell of Bridgeport, the hard hitting Yankee, whom Terry Lee declares is the coming lightweight champion, has been matched to box Al Schumaker, who recently defeated Phil Cross, at the Twentieth Century A. C., next Friday night at the St. Nicholas Rink.

Magnus Defeats Lauderbach.

Leon Magnus of New York defeated David Lauderbach of Brooklyn, 40 to 38, in the three-cushion billiard tourney between New York and Brooklyn players at Doyle's Billiard Academy last night. The game required fifty-five innings, and each had a high run of 4. Elliott Phelps of New York and John Huking of Brooklyn will be the opponents in to-night's game of the same tournament at the Knickerbocker Billiard Academy in Brooklyn.

There was practice morning and afternoon, the twelve men going out in pair oars under the personal supervision of Mr. Cook and the new coach, James Rogers, who was selected at the suggestion of the old oarsmen. PITTSBURGH, Penn., Sept. 19.—The galloping Giants made a clean sweep of the Pittsburgh series at Forbes Field to-day, and with Leon Ames in the box hurling the ball over with perfect control the Pirates were downed by a 3 to 1 score.

It took only an hour and forty minutes to do the trick. New York continued to hurry along toward the pennant at a championship gait and again got the jump on the Pirates at the start, winning their game in the first three innings and pushing their trio of counts over one in each inning. Again McGraw's men ran the bases like wildfire, three stolen sacks in the early part of the tilt figuring prominently in the production of each tally. Again the Buccaneers were amazed at New York's flying start. They didn't settle to their normal gait until it was too late and victory was out of their grasp. "Lefty" Leifield wasn't hit hard, except for three hits grouped in the second inning. But the Giants' jabs with the bat came when they did the most good and little effort in the batting line was wasted.

"Red" Ames had great control. His dips skirted over the edges of the plate, and up to the eighth inning only three hits were made off his delivery. In the ninth he wabbled a little bit, but his experience and generalship held him in good stead, for he retired the Pittsburghs when their best batters were waiting patiently to drive the Giants to cover in a rally. When danger threatened, with Wagner up, Ames cooly passed the German slugger. Then a timely hit by Miller saved the Pirates from the kalsomine vat, for he drove Vincent Campbell home with a lone tally. New York's work behind Ames was fast and brilliant, the only error being Devore's muff of a ball that was lost in the smoky Pittsburgh air.

To-day's victory is the eleventh for the Giants on the present trip without a defeat. The team is traveling at top speed, and all the players are flushed with the intoxicating feeling of victory.

The Giants got into their stride in the first inning. After Devore went out, McCarthy to Wagner, Doyle smashed a two-bagger close to the right-field foul line. Larry immediately made a daring steal of third base and scored while Miller was retiring Snodgrass at first. Murray went out by the same process. Byrne introduced himself to Ames in the first inning with a single to left. Carey struck out and Campbell was easy, Ames to Merkle. The ever-dangerous Wagner fouled to Herzog.

Another run for the Giants in the second inning. Merkle jammed a grounder at McCarthy which knocked him over. Fred stole second and went to third on Simon's bad throw. Herzog tapped a single to left, scoring Merkle. Herzog took a big lead off the bag and was caught napping. Fletcher died at first base and Meyers singled to centre, Ames ending the inning with a grasser to Leifield.

Every little run helps. Devore walked in the third inning and stole second. Doyle fanned. Snodgrass ripped off a drive to centre, scoring Devore. Snodgrass traveled right along toward second, but was nailed en route. Murray skied to Campbell

With two out in the fourth inning, Wagner broke his batting slump with a single to centre. Wilson hoisted a high fly into Devore's hands, but Joshua muffed it, Wagner going to third and Wilson to second. Don't worry about that, however, because Miller was out, Fletcher to Merkle. Campbell beat out a bunt in the sixth inning with two out, and the crowd implored Mr. Wagner to show no mercy. Honus flied to Devore and Josh didn't drop the ball again. With one out in the seventh, Fletcher singled to left. Meyers forced him at second and Ames popped to Miller.

From the bench Clarke couldn't understand why his men were unable to smash the slow, wide curves of Ames, so he took his trusty cudgel in hand and went into the game to bat for Simon in the eighth chapter. He soaked a terrific liner straight into Snodgrass's hands. Kelliher, a new man, was introduced as a pinch hitter for Leifield. He fanned, and Bobby Byrne cracked a rocket to Snodgrass.

Gardner and Gibson became the Pirate battery in the ninth inning. Murray rolled a grounder at Miller, but Jack gave "Red" new life with a fumble. Merkle struck out, Murray stealing second on the third strike. Herzog was an easy victim, Byrne to Wagner. Honus got Fletcher's foul fly near the stand. The heavy end of the Pirate batting list was up in the ninth. Ames was as cool as an Eskimo in Pearyland. He fanned Carey much to "Scoop's" surprise. Campbell, by a great burst of speed, beat out a tap to Merkle. Wagner's townsmen again asked him to do something that would go down in history. The German got a pass. The crowd got very much excited. What's this? Wilson struck out. Jack Miller then cracked a single to left, scoring Campbell. McKechnie was rushed in to bat for McCarthy.

Hold your hat a moment; this isn't nearly as gloomy as it looks. If McKechnie knocks the ball over the fence in Schenley Park, of course Pittsburgh will win. McKechnie, however, isn't that sort of a person. He shot a red-hot grounder at Herzog and was tossed out at first base.

STREWING VICTIMS ALONG THE GIANTS' PATH OF VICTORY.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Penn., Sept. 19.—Manager McGraw, invariably conservative in his predictions, has caught the spirit of unbridled confidence of the players and says he can't see where the Giants can lost now.

Pitcher Louis Drucke went to Youngstown, Ohio, yesterday and his arm was examined by "Bonesetter" Reese. Drucke has a misplaced muscle in his shoulder, an injury he sustained in a railroad wreck.

George Wiltse has an injured hip which was also examined by Reese, but this ailment is only believed to be temporary.

The Giants are not only proficient at stealing bases. They also show aptness at robbing Pirates of hits. Snodgrass took a three-bagger from Simon in the fifth inning with a brilliant running catch.

Rube Marquard is one of the happiest individuals in the Giant party. He has won 21 games and lost 5, and has struck out 217 men this season. If the Giants win the pennant Marquard gets a bonus and a New York admirer has promised him a $5,000 automobile. Rube is being showered with offers to go into vaudeville and will probably become an actor this Winter.

"I feel so good right now," says Marquard, "I'd work every day if they would let me."

Snodgrass was only dazed for a time when he was hit in the head by the ball yesterday and was back in the game to-day.

The Giants had to hustle to catch a 6 o'clock train for St. Louis.

Manager Fred Clarke was discouraged because he did not get a hit yesterday, and sent Campbell to left field. Clarke is hitting a few points behind Wagner. Both are in the .345 class. "Charley Horse" is keeping the head Buccaneer out of the game.

Herzog played under a great strain. His mother was stricken with paralysis yesterday and he expects to be called home at any time. Devlin is ready to take his place.

Back to cricket for Pittsburgh.

Phillies Shut Out Chicago, Burns Allowing One Hit.

CHICAGO, Sept. 19.—Allowing but one hit, that a scratch single by Archer in the sixth inning, Burns of Philadelphia shut out Chicago 2 to 0 in the first game of the series here to-day. Doubles by Knabe, Magee, and Luderus scored the first run in the opening inning. Paskert counted the other tally in the seventh on two errors, Beck's single, and Carter's sacrifice fly. Knabe of Philadelphia and Sheckard of Chicago were ordered off the field for disputing decisions of Umpire Eason. Score:

Twenty-eight Players in This Game.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Sept. 19.—It took twenty-eight players two hours and thirty minutes to play a game of ball here to-day, in which the seven participating pitchers were found for a total of thirty-eight hits and twenty-five runs. A sensational ninth inning rally ended the farce in St. Louis' favor, Boston losing 12 to 13. The second game was called off to allow Boston to catch a train. Score:

Left on bases—New York, 9; Cleveland, 8. Double plays—Birmingham, Lajoie, and Turnier. Struck out—By Fisher, 6; by Caldwell, 3; by Krapp, 3. Bases on balls—Off Fisher, 5; off Caldwell, 1; off Krapp, 9. Hit by pitchers—By Krapp, 2, (Wolter, Knight.) Passed balls—G. Fisher. Hits—Off Fisher, 6 in 8 innings, (at bat, 29;) off Caldwell, 6 in 1 inning, (at bat, 3.) Umpires—Messrs. Connolly and Westervelt. Time of game—Two hours and fifteen minutes.

The Yankees came within a few inches of defeating the Cleveland Naps at the Hilltop yesterday, the same few inches representing the distance between Birdie Cree's feet and the home plate in the ninth inning, when he was tagged out while trying for a home run on a drive to the right-field bulwarks. As soon as Gus Fisher laid the ball against Birdie's feet for the third out Umpire Tommy Connolly announced that the game was called on account of darkness. The score at the time was 3 to 3, and it would have been impossible to play another inning. As a result of the tie game the two teams will play a double-header this afternoon.

Two were out in the Yankees' half of the ninth inning when Birdie unloaded the wallop that almost broke up the game. It was a line drive to right field and Joe Jackson had set himself for a catch when he suddenly turned and sprinted in the direction of the fence, the ball going several feet above his head. Birdie easily made three bases on the wallop and had turned third when Neal Ball, acting as relay agent to the plate, took the throw from Jackson, who was at the fence. Ball turned quickly and made an accurate throw to Catcher Fisher, the latter tagging Cree as he slid toward the plate.

For seven innings the game produced nothing of an exciting nature. Both Fisher and Krapp were effective in holding down the opposing stickers, and the hit column showed only four markers for the Naps, against three for the Yankees. Fisher was never in trouble up to this stage, but Krapp had considerable difficulty because of his poor control. In the first seven innings he handed out seven passes and hit one batsman, but he got away safely, as the Yankees could do no better than collect three scattered singles.

In the eighth inning both teams got busy and enlivened the game, the Yankees again making matters even after the Naps had broken the 1 to 1 tie and picked up an extra run for good measure. With one out, Olson strolled, and he moved around to third base on Jackson's slow roller along the first-base line. Lajoie was purposely walked and the bases were full. Birmingham chased a high bounder between second base and short field, which Birdie Cree managed to flag but not to hold. After recovering the ball, Cree made a throw to Chase that was both late and wild, the ball rolling to the bleachers, while Jackson followed Olson across the plate. Lajoie reached third on the error, and Birmingham stole second on Neal Ball's third strike. Turner hit a liner that was headed toward the three-base hit section of right field, but Chase shot into the air and made a spectacular catch with his gloved hand. The play saved the game for the Yankees as later developments proved.

The Yankees got the runs back in their half of the same inning. Chase beat out a hopper to Neal Ball and took an extra base when Ball threw poorly to first base. Hartzell walked and Knight was hit, filling the bases. Dolan struck out and Hemphill was sent in to bat for Blair. A passed ball allowed Chase to register, and a pass to Hemphill again filled the bases. Daniels batted for Fisher and flied to Birmingham. Hartzell scored on the out, but Knight, who tried to advance from second to third on the same play, was thrown out by Lajoie, who intercepted Birmingham's return to the plate.

In the ninth inning Caldwell went in to pitch and he started badly by passing Gus Fisher. Gus stole second, but was stranded there while Krapp, Butcher, and Olson were going out in order on strikes. Zinn and Handiboe were easy in the Yankees' half and then came the splash by Cree that truned out to be a near-homer.

The Yankees scored their first run on the fourth inning on a pass to Cree, Chase's sacrifice, Hartzell's out, and Knight's single. The Naps tied the score in the sixth on Butcher's single, his steal, Blair's poor throw which allowed an extra base, and Jackson's infield hit. This ended the scoring for both teams up to the busy eighth inning.

Harry Wolter, the first Yankee to face Krapp in the opening inning, was struck on the knee with a pitched ball and so badly injured that he was forced to retire from the game, Zinn taking his place. In the eighth inning Krapp was injured in a collision with Chase at first base while covering the bag on Hal's grounder to Ball, but was able to resume play in a short time, and he finished the game.

Cobb's Batting Does Not Save Tigers.

BOSTON, Sept. 19.—A homer by Cobb in the first inning gave Detroit its only tally to-day and Boston won, 2 to 1. The Georgia Peach's three hits were the only ones made off Collins until the ninth. Then Speaker's stop and throw to the plate retired Delehanty for the third out. Tonneman, the Red Sox catcher, secured from Jersey City, showed well. The score:

Chief Bender Ill with "Grip."

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 19.—Baseball "fans" who follow the fortunes of the world's champions were a bit disturbed to-day to learn that "Chief" Bender, the star Indian pitcher, is confined to his bed with the grip. Because of their commanding lead, the Athletics fully expect to win the American League pennant and are planning for the world's series. Bender's illness may disarrange these plans unless he quickly responds to treatment. Connie Mack said to-day he expected to use the "Chief" in the coming Detroit series and then rest him up for the prospective series with the National League pennant winners. He still hopes that he will be able to carry out his plans.

HILTON WINS LONG MATCH FROM FOWNES

British and American Champion Golfer Downs Pittsburgher at Extra Green.

Special to The New York Times.

SOUTHAMPTON, N. Y., Sept. 19.—This time a Western golfer will try his hand as opponent of Harold Hilton in the final round of a golf tournament. "Chic" Evans of Chicago will fight it out with the champion of Great Britain and the United States at the National Golf Links of America to-morrow. They will play thirty-six holes.

As further evidence that Hilton is not having matters all his own way on this side of the Atlantic it may be stated that the Briton had to play an extra hole in order to dispose of W. C. Fownes, Jr., of Pittsburgh, the former National title holder. Furthermore, had Hilton not saved himself by "sinking" a tricky downhill putt in the home green there would be a different story to tell. At the extra hole Hilton brought off another putt of twelve feet for a four, good enough to win the match. The pace was not especially fast, Hilton getting round in 82 to Fownes 83.

Evans began the day well by eliminating Fred Herreshoff, the far driving Westbrook crack. Although long off the tees Herreshoff had poor direction, getting into all kinds of trouble. Evans was more fortunate. Later on Evans went out in 38 against William Watson of Baltusrol, good enough to place the French champion 4 up at the turn. He won the next three holes and the match by a 7 and 6 margin. The tournament will be completed to-morrow, and in addition to the match rounds in the various divisions there will be an 18-hole handicap. The summary:

First Sixteen.—Second Round—W. C. Fownes, Jr., Oakmont, beat John M. Ward, Garden City, 3 up and 2 to play; H. H. Hilton, Royal Liverpool, beat C. B. Pennsylvania Gelding Makes World's Record in Detroit Trotting.

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 19.—Peter Thompson, a bay gelding driven by Serrill, and owned by A. B. Coxe of Pali, Penn., won fresh laurels to-day at the Michigan State Fair Grounds, when in the second heat of the Matron Stake he established a new world's record of 2:08¼ for three-year-old trotting geldings. Last month at Cleveland, this game son of Peter the Great set the mark at 2:09¼.

All three heats in the trotting division of the Matron Stake were thrilling contests, and in each instance there was a whipping drive down the stretch and a close finish. The summaries:

Uhlan Races Fast in Vermont.

WHITE RIVER JUNCTION, Vt., Sept. 19.—Uhlan, the black gelding, owned by C. G. K. Billings of Cleveland, Ohio, to-day covered the fastest mile ever made by a harness horse in Vermont. The time was 2:04¼. The exhibition was the feature of the opening day of the fifth annual Vermont State Fair. Uhlan was driven to a sulky over the half-mile track by Charles ("Doc") Tanner, and had a runner as pacemaker.

In a twelve-minute biplane flight, Charles K. Hamilton made a bad landing and ran his machine into a fence, crushing one of the wings. It is expected he will have it ready for flights to-morrow.

Miss Marie Wagner, the National indoor singles champion, appeared in the special lawn tennis tournament for women in the clay courts of the Montclair Athletic Club at Montclair, N. J., yesterday, and figured in three matches, all of which she won. In the singles Miss Wagner began by defeating Miss Katharine Ames by the score of 6–3, 6–1. Then she played Miss Clara Kuttroff of the West Side Tennis Club, and the two engaged in some spirited rallies, from out of which the National champion emerged successful at 6–2, 6–love. Miss Wagner and Miss Kuttroff paired in the doubles. They played exceptionally well, and disposed of the pair from the Orange Lawn Tennis Club, Miss Eleanor Souther and Miss Strange, by the score of 6–2, 6–2. The summary:

G. Murray and partner, by default.

Charles M. Bull, Jr., has won his way to the final of the Crescent A. C. championship, where he waits the winner of the Campbell-Lodewick match in the semi-final. Bull is in the lower section of the draw, and in the semi-final was opposed by H. B. Bretz, who gave the joint holder of the Western doubles title a stiff argument. The match went to four sets the good court covering and hard driving of Bretz being the chief causes of the extended tussel. Bull played consistent tennis throughout and this with the stamina earned him the victory over his opponent by the score of 6–1, 6–2, 2–6, 6–2. No man who ever gained the final of a Crescent A. C. championship had to work harder to reach there than Bull, for in the second round he had a four-set battle with R. E. Lewis and in the semi-final the tilt went to five sets, between himself and O. A. Sargeant, the tally in Bull's favor being 3–6, 6–8, 6–3, 6–2, 6–0.

Men's Singles—Third Round.—W. A. Campbell defeated Miles S. Charlock, 6–0, 6–2, 6–2; J. S. Lodewick defeated Harry C. Martin, by default; H. B. Bretz defeated M. A. Noble, 11–9, 6–3, 6–1; Charles M. Bull, Jr., defeated A. O. Sargeant, 3–6, 6–8, 6–3, 6–2, 6–0.

Semi-final Round—C. M. Bull, Jr., defeated H. B. Bretz, 6–1, 6–2, 2–6.

1912 THOMAS IS HERE!

The Thomas "Six" is endorsed by hundreds of conservative business men all over the country.

The 1912 Thomas "Six" is not only the logical result of a dozen years of progressive motor car manufacturing, exclusively of the highest type, but every detail of construction expresses the successful culmination of seven years' experience of the Thomas Company with "Sixes."

The 1912 Thomas "Six" is a continuation of the same model now in its third year.

Furthermore, it has not required a single radical change.

In fact, three years ago the public's verdict of approval warranted our making "Sixes" exclusively.

Cars built by the Thomas Company have always been long lived. They are among the first four manufacturers of touring cars costing $3500.00 and over, who have the greatest number of automobiles running in New York State, regardless of year, according to the last recapitulation which covered cars made by over two hundred different concerns.

The appended unsolicited letters are similar to many received from owners who have tested the Thomas "Six" under the most severe conditions, and after all is said and done, owners' tests are far more conclusive than those of the manufacturer.

Gentlemen:-

I am glad to give you my experience with the 1911 6-40 Thomas, which I have used constantly since last March, covering 7000 miles going over the White Mountains and those in the Berkshires, some of which are considered and posted as impassable for automobiles, driving the car under all kinds of conditions, and it is running better now than when new.

I have owned several other makes of automobiles and have no hesitation in saying this car is much the most comfortable and gives the greatest pleasure with the feeling of reserve power, and knowing regardless of what is ahead, it will certainly get over it.

Before purchasing I made a careful comparison with other leading makes of high grade cars, and in the course of my investigation, obtained from you a list of over two hundred users of the 1910 Model M Thomas, and wrote them as to their experience. I received most enthusiastic answers, almost 100% being fully satisfied with the Thomas. It was the most unanimous endorsement that any car could receive, proving far more than any demonstration, and this fact induced me to purchase.

Since purchasing, I have been very much pleased with the service rendered, and in conclusion, would say that, in my opinion, your car is, at least for my requirements, the best and most satisfactory of any automobile on the market today.

Gentlemen:-

We have just returned from a trip through New York State and I think you will be interested to learn how magnificently our "Big Six" behaved.

We went to Buffalo, returning through the Catskills via Tannersville and Kingston, making just 996 miles on this tour, using 104 gallons of gasoline, and had no tire or other trouble of any kind. "Phoebe Ann" was as lively as a cricket and safe and sure in every emergency. It was the finest trip we ever took in point of comfortable riding, -over rough, rocky and hilly spots as slowly as we pleased and giving everything on the road our dust on the good macadam.

My "Big Six" has had several thousand miles of driving during the past year and I regard it as the acme in safe and luxurious touring.

Your ability to furnish prompt and efficient service is sure to be appreciated by all owners.

John Ford

We are organized, equipped and qualified to give prompt and efficient service.
Our Demonstrator is here for your inspection. You are cordially invited to ride in it.

THE CANAL, THE RAILWAYS, AND THE COUNTRY.

Any idea that the questions connected with the use of the Panama Canal can be postponed conveniently or judiciously until its completion is mistaken. The interval is none too long to allow for the adjustment of tolls and the preparations necessary by merchants and steamship companies for using that route instead of those to which they are accustomed. Already the railways are making their preparations for meeting their rival, and the suggestion has been made that their influence assisted if it did not cause the neglect of Congress at its last session to deal with Col. GOETHALS's request for immediate action on the subject. Col. GOETHALS, as a prudent administrator, wants conditions fixed for a considerable period before the official opening.

For this reason there is present timeliness in the elaborate discussion in last Sunday's TIMES by Mr. BABSON regarding what the tolls ought to be, and what will be the commercial effect of the opening of the route. Those who are interested in the subject owe it to themselves to read what is perhaps the best discussion of the subject yet published. They will remark the contrast between Mr. BABSON's conclusions and the forecast of the Inter-State Commerce Commission in the Spokane rate case that the competition between the transisthmian and the transcontinental routes would be severe. In Mr. BABSON's opinion the amount of business affected is unlikely at most to be more than a year or two's normal growth of the railways. Moreover, this competition, whatever its proportions, is already effective via the Tehuantepec route, and the railways are further protecting themselves by acquiring an interest in north and south railways, whose traffic will be increased irrespective of the diversion of business from the east and west routes. In time of transit the Panama route will have no advantage over the Tehuantepec route, and it is conceivable that the railways might so accelerate their freight schedules as to surpass both, at least on high-class business.

This moderate view is reasonable, and occupies a middle position between those who used to think that the Panama route would ruin the railways and those who took the view attributed to Mr. HILL that the railways would provide a service so far superior that the canal would be filled with lily pads. It is altogether desirable that the canal should make traffic of its own, and that neither it nor the railways should put the other out of business. For this reason it is to be hoped that the canal will be administered upon business principles, and not with indifference to commercial considerations. Although it is customary to regard the canal as of huge proportions, its capital is less than any of several railways. There are railway haters who might rejoice to see the canal operated without regard to its cost exactly because that might embarrass the railways through producing an uneconomic and destructive competition. It is sure that the damage done would exceed any advantage by the reduction of rates in such manner. Prosperity has never been experienced in any period of general railway prostration such as might conceivably follow a rate between the Atlantic and Pacific Coasts so low as to unsettle the fabric of all dependent local or inland rates. The canal ought to earn its own support, and it must charge rates low enough to win business from the Tehuantepec route. One pending bill names a rate of $1.25, or a little below the Tehuantepec rate. Another pending bill names a maximum of $1.50 and a minimum of 50 cents. These rates would earn operating costs, but would hardly earn interest on capital.

No Public Utility Commission nowadays would authorize a competing railway capitalized on a basis which would make the earning of its interest impracticable. Yet the Nation has ordered such "unfair" competition for the railways. The reason is that the canal is political as well as commercial in its motive. The world could not endure that the Isthmus should not be made a thoroughfare, and the Nation could not endure that this thoroughfare should be in the control of any strong Power, friendly or otherwise. In other words, the canal was not built primarily for profit, and it was placed at the service of the world's commerce irrespective of competition with our own producers or distributers. The Nation unanimously supported this construction cost regardless of profit or loss, but it would not be equally united in support of operation in contempt of balance sheets generally as well as of the canal itself. The canal has capacity for great harm as well as for great good, and the adoption of a policy covering these points is a matter of importance inferior to few pending questions, and of urgency inferior to still fewer.

THE RELIGIOUS REVIVAL.

The proposed religious revival under the guidance of the Protestant churches throughout the country promises to be the most systematic and businesslike in the history of such movements. No emotional centre is discernible. No typical revivalist preacher of the Whitefield or Moody kind is attracting followers to the movement by his sincerity and eloquence and his original manner of expression. A central body of clergymen and laymen, with working committees and traveling agents, has the movement in hand. The revival of religious thought and feeling that is to be thus engineered is not to be taken as an indication of the promoters' idea that religion is losing its grip in this country. They disclaim that idea. Their aim is thus set forth by one of their leaders:

> The Men and Religion Forward Movement is essentially one of hope and not of despair. Its chief value is to show the strength of the Christian churches in America, not their weakness. We hope not to keep this country from growing less Christian, but to make it altogether Christian.

To accomplish this purpose thorough and practical organization is to be relied upon, it seems, with effective coöperation of the churches and churchmen in all parts of the city, rather than, as in most of the historic revivals, the commanding personal influence of one preacher or eloquent layman. This, therefore, seems to be a movement precisely in accord with the spirit of these times, and, so far, promises well.

But in order to have strong effects it must stir the emotions of the people. No revival of religious spirit can be successfully made through merely intellectual appeal. The overemotionalism of former revivals has frequently been followed by relapse, of course, but that need not be the case when the emotional appeal is directed with sagacity and well controlled. The aim of the promoters, of course, includes ethical as well as religious reform, the upbuilding of morals as well as the awakening of faith. In Manhattan the movement has been slowly taking shape. Next Sunday many of the Protestant churches will join in giving it its first real start. A convention and a huge parade in this town in November may be expected to call forth great crowds of participants and onlookers upon whom the influence thus exerted cannot fail to be beneficial. No doubt the time is ripe for the movement and the place fitting.

THE ELECTION LAW.

The ground upon which Justice GAVEGAN of the Supreme Court holds that the Levy election law is unconstitutional seems to the lay mind entirely sound. That the law "deprives members of this State of rights and privileges secured" to other citizens can hardly be reasonably denied. Indeed, it would appear that that was precisely the intent of the law. Citizens who desire to vote a straight ticket in a perfectly simple and easy manner have the right and privilege to do so under this statute. Citizens who desire to vote discriminatingly and with independent judgment are denied the right and the privilege to do so easily and simply. It is obvious that such deprivation of the rights and privileges of recalcitrant citizens would be to the distinct advantage of Tammany. The fusion opportunities they have heretofore enjoyed in this respect have been used in a manner extremely disagreeable to the managers of Tammany, and they are likely, if preserved, to be used in a still more damaging fashion in the future. The Levy law was passed to prevent this.

We have little fondness or respect for the form of "fusion" that has often prevailed in the past. Such benefits as it has brought about have too often been offset by the difficulties and scandals to which the method has lent itself. The Independence League, which is the prime mover in the litigation leading up to the present decision, is not an altogether admirable organization, and its methods do not shine even in comparison with those of Tammany, but it is, of course, a chief element in most of the fusion movements against which the Levy bill is aimed. We are strongly persuaded that the best means to enable the opposition to Tammany to assume effective form would be a short ballot on the principle of the Massachusetts ballot, with the addition of party symbols, which we think are required to meet the provisions of our State Constitution. But pending the adoption of some sensible reform of this sort there is no doubt that the invalidation of the Levy law would be for the public good. The decision of Justice GAVEGAN will be promptly appealed, and it is hoped that final adjudication by the Appellate Division and by the Court of Appeals will be reached in time for the adjustment of the ballots for the approaching election in accordance with legal requirements. The Levy law is such a grotesque and barefaced attempt to secure political advantage for an evil organization that it is permissible to express the desire that the courts will see their way to slaying it.

PUNISHING THE GUILTY.

President TAFT takes an impregnable position when he declares that the anti-trust law needs no amendment. It is a statute entirely adequate for the punishment of those offenses and practices against which it is erected. Enforced with knowledge and understanding of what it means, it will reach the guilty while leaving the innocent unharmed. Until the Supreme Court spoke in the Standard Oil and Tobacco cases the innocent together with the guilty were in some peril.

This statute was invoked yesterday against three "trusts." An action was brought against the Powder "trust" by a rival company which seeks heavy damages for injury to its business, which it alleges resulted from the unlawful procedures of the "trust." In this city an action was brought to dissolve the Kindling Wood "trust." In Boston the Federal Grand Jury brought in an indictment against the Directors of the United Shoe Machinery Company. It is alleged that these Directors, in the merger of the constituent companies, were guilty of an actual restraint of trade, and that by oppressive procedures they have destroyed competition; also, that they have been guilty of a conspiracy to monopolize the shoe manufacturing machinery business.

The truth of these allegations remains to be established by the evidence. Assuming that they are true, there can be no word of complaint or criticism of the Administration for undertaking to enforce the law against these Directors. The wonder is that, after reading or hearing about the latest decisions of the Supreme Court, the men of the Shoe Machinery Company should have had the hardihood to persist in such practices. If they have done and continue to do the things set forth in the indictment, they must have known that they were violating the law, or, at least, their counsel, if he were fit to serve them as counsel, would have advised them to that effect. Business men who continue to violate the Sherman act and to defy it, now that its meaning has been clearly made known, have not the slightest ground to complain that "business is disturbed" by these prosecutions. They themselves are guilty of the grossest contributory negligence in inviting the disturbance of which they complain. Innocent business that is disturbed, and seriously disturbed, by procedures against the trusts has, on the other hand, ample cause to complain of those who are inviting the disturbance. The plea of ignorance can no longer avail the violators of the anti-trust law.

BUILD THE COURT HOUSE.

Do we need so much activity in the Legislature touching the selection of a site for a new Court House in this borough and county? The untiring Senator STILWELL has now introduced another Court House bill. It seems that a site might have been selected by the Court House Board and approved by the Board of Estimate without any aid from Senator STILWELL at all. The Court House Board and the Board of Estimate, we believe, have the matter under consideration now. There is a choice of available sites. Senator STILWELL's newest bill (No. 3) places the matter in the hands of the Board of Estimate for six months. Thereafter, if no site is chosen, the Court House Board will select a site without consulting the Board of Estimate. As the selection of a site in a park is expressly prohibited in the present bill, who can guess what its purpose is?

A site for the Court House ought to be selected now, with no further waste of time, STILWELL or no STILWELL. The delay in this matter has become disgraceful.

MISTAKEN PATRIOTISM.

The dollar dinner (for political purposes only) was serviceable fifteen years ago, and it was fairly useful four years later. But both as a symbol of democratic simplicity and as a fearless defiance of hygienic law in the name of plain living, it has become a nuisance. The really high-minded statesmen of the Middle West ought to find some better way to honor the President when he visits them than to give him a cheap dinner (as advertised) and wear their old clothes. There is no danger to American pride in a clean shirt, a white lawn cravat, and a swallow-tailed coat. There is neither patriotism nor dignity in eating badly cooked, badly chosen food.

It is time for the Middle West to get over that sort of claptrap. Everybody knows that the Middle Westerners are fond of mixed drinks and reasonably high living. To be sure, not a single Middle Western State is renowned for either its cooking or its especial dishes. There is nothing like Vermont's roast turkey, Maine's lobster, Maryland's terrapin, Virginia's ham. But, all in all, they fare well, and do not, as a rule, prefer canned vegetables to fresh ones from the garden. They know how long meat should hang, and, except in the most bigoted communities, have stopped dressing salads with either sugar or molasses.

Arise, O ye people of the Middle West, and rebuke gammon! If you invite the foremost citizen of the Nation to dine with you, give him of the best you can afford and brag indecently neither of its cheapness nor its expensiveness. In the old days at home, when the minister came to supper, your folks did not tell him how much or how little the provender cost. As for the affected dislike for a "dress suit," the time has passed for that, too. Senator BAILEY of Texas is about to retire to private life.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Frightened About Nothing. Remembering how recently it was that in this country the most serious of apprehensions were excited by the announcement that black and white pugilists of high degree were to meet in combat, one cannot be too much amused by the similar fears, similarly caused, in England. We had, however, better excuses for our foolish fears than our dear cousins have.

In the first place, our "race problem" is right at home, while theirs exists only in remote corners of their empire, and even there is much more political than ethnic. Again, a really well-advertised fight between a white man and a black one was something new when our panic occurred, and we had at least the justification of ignorance for assuming that the two gladiators would be generally credited with something of the representative character which they and their managers were for business reasons so glad to claim. But though the negro whipped his adversary with particular thoroughness and ridiculous ease, the consequences were nothing more terrifying than a few barroom brawls, and the race-fellows of the victor obligingly refrained from doing any of the terrible things which many professed experts felt sure they would do the moment news came that their champion had beaten the most efficient combination of strength, skill, and courage the white race could produce.

The fact is that both races, either consciously or subconsciously, appreciated the littleness and the unimportance of what the battle proved, and the elation of the negroes was as superficial and brief as was the humiliation of the whites. The pillars of the Republic stood as firmly after the fight as before it, and only failure to heed an American lesson accounts for the fact that the Britishers are having exactly the sort of panic we did and are making desperate efforts to save their WELLS from the defeat which they apparently think he is sure to suffer if he and the swarthy JOHNSON come together in the only ring that has four corners.

To draw a color line in pugilism is a wild absurdity. The relative status of the two races cannot possibly be determined or affected in this way. Victor and vanquished are alike negligible in estimating racial superiorities and inferiorities, and of all rivals or competitors in the world the prizefighter is about the least to be feared. His natural end was well illustrated here this week when two recently notable exponents of the fistic art were sent to the workhouse for begging pennies in the street.

A Statesman of the East Side. "JIMMY" OLIVER being dead, it is natural and proper that many people are saying pleasant things about him, and, as not infrequently happens, the pleasant things are all true. The man did have certain charms and graces that account for the sort of eminence he long possessed and for the large number of his friends and well-disposed acquaintances.

A professional politician of the old, now disappearing, type, "JIMMY" OLIVER dressed the part as carefully as he acted it, and the essential kindliness of his heart need not be denied merely because his ideas about being good to people were of the old-fashioned sort that will not bear analysis. Charity, for him, was almsgiving, regardless of what effect it might have beside the immediate relief of hunger, thirst, or cold, and a man under arrest was a man "in trouble," to be helped to freedom without too close scrutiny—or with none at all—into the cause or reason for his sequestration.

They liked "JIMMY" OLIVER on the Bowery, partly because he was a Bowery product and partly because he had a genial way about him and regarded money as something to be spent or given away. It did not bother his admirers that of the statesman he had nothing except a long black coat; that as a lawyer he had no clients except criminals who needed the exercise of political "pull" in the lower courts, not legal ability. He was "good to the poor" in his own way, and he saw no inconsistency in doing for years everything he could to keep out of jail and to protect the systematic robbery of the "policy king" who was probably the most ruthless, the meanest, and the most efficient enemy the poor of this city ever had.

As a legislator, it can at least be said of "JIMMY" OLIVER that he was never prominent in the scandals of Albany, that he accumulated no wealth during his long stay there, and that loyalty as he understood it explains why he usually "voted right." He was an interesting exponent of his time and of his environment, with something of ambition, something of dignity, and a good deal of pride, not altogether unjustified. A sense of humor saved him from taking himself too seriously. Probably he was a better man than most of his associates, and he seems to have had the instincts of democracy, while nobody denies his personal honesty. He will be sincerely mourned by many for whom he did exactly what they wanted him to do, and he will not soon be forgotten, even though most people did laugh at him a little as well as with him.

A Charge Sadly Familiar. Again have the police of this city been formally, explicitly, and as a body, accused of resorting to deliberate perjury to save one of their number from deserved punishment. Rarely, however, has this accusation been made in a way that demanded and compelled as much attention as in the case of the man HORAY, on trial in General Sessions this week for robbing a Russian immigrant.

HORAY was convicted, though the immigrant was practically the only witness against him, and though six policemen, including a Lieutenant and a Sergeant, solemnly swore that an essential part of his story—a part implicating a member of the police force in the robbery—was not and could not be true. Judge SWANN commended the jurymen for disregarding the testimony of the policemen, and from the bench said that he did not himself believe a word of it.

The situation thus created should be intolerable to the police force, to Commissioner WALDO, and to the public. Either those six policemen have suffered a cruel wrong or they should be promptly stripped of their uniforms and sent to jail. Their crime, if they have committed one, should be easily proved, and their vindication, if innocent, should be no more difficult.

The Abstainers.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It was hitting the nail on the head when you remarked on prohibition: "They will [the abstainers] never be very successful until they give more attention than hitherto to explaining—and proving—that even the most moderate use of intoxicants is a practical disadvantage in the competition of life." The fittest will survive, so Darwin told us, and if this is true, the world will soon be populated by only those "who never drank anything stronger than tea." But—keep on your feet—look back and pick out half a dozen of the most successful men in the world's history, investigate, and convince yourself that they were not abstainers.

CONGRATULATING THE TIMES.

Letters from Readers Inspired by the Sixtieth Anniversary Number.

THE TIMES continues to receive messages of congratulation on its sixtieth anniversary. Among the letters that came yesterday from readers were these:

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have your sixtieth anniversary edition to-day. When you celebrated your fiftieth anniversary I wrote you that I was one of the oldest subscribers—forty-five years. I write to-day to say that I am "top of soil" and still reading your paper.

JUSTIN S. WHITE.

Montclair, N. J., Sept. 18, 1911.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Allow me to join the army of your readers in congratulating you on the sixtieth anniversary of the foundation of your excellent paper.

We think enough of THE TIMES to buy daily two copies of it, one for the folks and one that I carry on the car to my place of business.

With best wishes from us all for the continuation of the life and prosperity of THE TIMES.

MORTON LIEBSCHUTZ.

Newark, N. J., Sept. 18, 1911.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I sincerely congratulate you on the sixtieth "birthday" of the "standard New York newspaper"—THE TIMES. I hope you will continue to make THE TIMES as great a success and pleasure to the public in the future as you have certainly done in the past.

ISABELLE ANSPACH.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Congratulations upon the "Diamond Jubilee number" of THE NEW YORK TIMES of Sept. 18, 1911.

THORNTON PURKIS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Congratulations and best wishes—sixty years young. After reading THE TIMES every morning for years, I am convinced that you need not say "All the News That's Fit to Print." There is no need for a tag on the character of THE TIMES.

NEIGHBORS' GOOD WISHES.

Times Anniversary Brings Compliments from Other Newspapers.

From The New York World.

Yesterday was the sixtieth anniversary of THE NEW YORK TIMES. The principal gift in sight was the new home the newspaper is building on Forty-third Street, near Seventh Avenue. The birthday cake was an eighteen-page supplement in which THE TIMES told how it had started on Sept. 18, 1851, in a small building at 113 Nassau Street, and grown to need its present facilities.

Henry Jarvis Raymond, the first editor, was succeeded by John Foord. Charles R. Miller became its editor in 1884, and THE TIMES moved into a new building on Park Row in 1887.

In 1896 a company headed by Adolph S. Ochs and formed by Mr. Miller, who still remains the editor, took over THE TIMES. In 1905 it removed to its present edifice at Forty-second Street and Broadway.

When a World representative called upon Mr. Miller yesterday, Mr. Miller said:

"THE TIMES sends greetings to The World with all cordial good wishes for its continuance in prosperity and in the good work. It is matter for mutual congratulation that THE TIMES generally finds itself in substantial agreement with The World on all great public questions."

Fills a Big Place.

From The Brooklyn Standard Union.

THE NEW YORK TIMES to-day celebrates its sixtieth birthday. It is neither old nor young, or perhaps it would be better to say that it is both. Measured by its record during the threescore years it has been serving the public, recalling the many notable achievements, the most conspicuous of which was the exposure of the Tweed ring, it is old. At least its years have been crowded with important events. But considered merely as it is to-day THE TIMES is as youthful appearing, as attractive and entertaining as a girl graduate. But with those desirable qualities go the vigor of the university athlete and the wisdom of the gray-haired Faculty. THE TIMES has grown during its sixty years at the rate the metropolis has, which ought to be considered by its owners glory enough. It fills a big place in the journalism of the country.

Progress in Journalism.

From The Baltimore Sun.

THE NEW YORK TIMES celebrates its sixtieth anniversary by publishing a special anniversary number copiously illustrated. These illustrations show the progress of THE TIMES from Sept. 18, 1851, to the present time, as well as the changes in the great City of New York. Connected with THE TIMES and with its contemporaries in its early life were some great names. There were giants in newspaperdom in New York in those days. It was the time of personal journalism, when the personality of the great editor overshadowed his paper. A leader in The Tribune was an expression not of The Tribune, but of Horace Greeley. In THE TIMES Henry J. Raymond and George Jones spoke to their readers; Charles A. Dana in The New York Sun, at a later time, and Bennett in The Herald.

A great change has taken place. Mr. Henry Watterson is the last of the old regime of newspaper editors. Now the work of the head of a great paper is vastly more complicated, and in many respects more important than that of the great editors of other times.

Success Without Sensationalism.

From The Philadelphia Ledger.

THE NEW YORK TIMES commemorated yesterday its sixtieth anniversary, a shining example of the increasing strength which comes with years to a newspaper that has consistently held itself "not as an instrument of private service and utility, but as an institution devoted to the public use."

While THE NEW YORK TIMES has held continuously its position as a substantial and conservative journal, its recent extraordinary growth in circulation and widespread recognition is a striking proof that popularity is not, as often assumed, dependent upon sensation and scandal. It has won its great popular success, against all sensational competition, without ever swerving from the honorable lines of dignified journalism on which it has built up its character through these sixty years.

SUNDAY'S CROWDED TROLLEYS.

Is Indignant That Better Facilities Are Not Afforded.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Coming on an open trolley car from Stamford to New Rochelle last Sunday evening between 6 and 8 o'clock I counted thirteen packed along one seat, a seat built to accommodate five! Needless to explain all were not seated—that would be a privilege too great to expect under any circumstances. Six enjoyed that inestimable good fortune; of these two women held their children on their laps. A mother (of comfortably motherly proportions) and four more children stood in front of those who were seated. In mercy to the poor little kiddies my sister and I each took one upon her lap. The space in which the poor woman was obliged to stand was so narrow that she was also practically upon my lap, while one of her little boys, (dropping with weariness, poor child!) sat upon the little girl, who sat upon my sister's lap! This sounds like a Chinese puzzle, but it isn't. In the seat behind people were standing and sitting upon each other in a disgustingly crowded manner. And all through the car the same conditions prevailed. Are we, I wonder, human beings or cattle? And why should the people's valuable franchises be given to corporations who are too niggardly to provide trolley cars enough to accommodate the Sunday crowds? Sunday is the workingman's, the workingman's one day of rest and recreation. Why should the little pleasure trip be turned into a thing of torture?

By the way, in this seat, crammed with women and children, standing, sprawling, wriggling, and hanging on in every conceivable way, sat one man—a dapper, well-dressed American man! And there he sat all through the two-hour trip from Stamford to New Rochelle. Once he moved—to glare at my (adopted) kiddie, whose little golden head fell sleepily against his shoulder. If I should become a suffragette I wonder could I vote that man—off the earth? Dear sisters (of the anti-militant type) please answer.

LAWYERS' EXPENDITURES.

Denounces Their Running Up of Bills for Their Clients.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

An important subject for the attention of the leaders of the bar of this city and country who have any interest in creating and maintaining a high standard of honor in the profession, as well as all business men who are required to lend credit to lawyers, is the practice of many attorneys of incurring bills and expenditures in litigation, and when such bills are attempted to be collected responsibility is disclaimed and placed upon the client, who may or may not be insolvent or undesirous to pay such indebtedness.

If my memory serves me right, a decision by a Supreme Court Judge in this county holds that an attorney acts as agent for a client, and is therefore not responsible for bills incurred by the attorney for a client, even though the name of such client or the attorney's principal is undisclosed. This is a most pernicious system.

When an attorney desires services rendered or material furnished in any action or proceeding, he calls upon the business man to supply his needs. It is manifestly impossible for any man first to make inquiries of the attorney as to the name, address, business, and responsibility of his client before entering into business arrangements. Most lawyers would consider such inquiries an offense, for ordinary principles of honor would dictate that no man, especially one who acts in a fiduciary capacity, would incur a bill for another unless he were reasonably certain that that bill would be paid. But this is not the position that most attorneys assume, even those who are reputed to stand high at the bar.

The results of all litigation are problematical, and lawyers know this. Many incur bills indiscriminately, with the conscious or unconscious knowledge that should they be successful such bills will be paid from the costs taxed in the action, or if unsuccessful it is up to the client to meet them. More often than not the client knows absolutely nothing of the incurring of the obligation until the creditor presents his bill to him.

How unjust it is to the business man to permit a lawyer to incur expenditures without being personally responsible or having positive knowledge that the bills will be paid, either by securing in advance the money covering such bills or knowing that the client is solvent without question is manifest. It is the essence of dishonesty for an attorney to incur a large indebtedness with the intention of placing the responsibility upon his client or with the knowledge that his client is insolvent or undesirous of paying such expenses.

It seems to have been a grievous omission from the Code of Ethics adopted by the New York Bar Association in failing to place the responsibility of all indebtedness in litigation upon the attorney, making it necessary for him to secure a retainer for costs alone or taking the responsibility of the inability of his client to pay, and making it a serious transgression for a lawyer to incur debts and placing the responsibility upon a client whom he knows is irresponsible.

Men who practice law are to be treated with the greater severity when their actions are not distinctly within the finest distinctions of honor and ethics than others who do not act in a confidential and fiduciary capacity.

The method that is usually followed is this: A lawyer engages an expert either to testify or in the preparation of a case. A bill is presented and ignored until a final demand for payment is made. Then for the first time the creditor is advised that the lawyer is not responsible and that the client is the man to be pursued; that he, the lawyer, has been endeavoring to collect the bill, but the client refused to pay. And that ends it as far as the attorney is concerned. When the client is requested to pay, he disclaims the authority of his attorney to incur the debt, and it is then a case of battledore and shuttlecock. If the client is sued, he proves a limited authority on the part of the attorney to incur debt. If the attorney is sued, he proves that he acted only as agent for another.

BOGROFF A GENTILE?

Says Assassin and His Father Were Born in the Greek Church.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The death of Russia's Premier is surely pregnant of such momentous developments of the political situation in Russia that the question of the identity of his assassin and of the character of the assassination is not devoid of rather ominous importance.

The culprit is described in the dispatch as "an orthodox Jew." I happen to have known the family of the "well-known lawyer Grigori Bogroff," (the father of the assassin) for a number of years. Both father and son have been born in the Greek Orthodox Church. It was generally known that the father of Grigori Bogroff, who was also named Grigori, has been a baptized Jew, but he married a Christian. So that Dimitry Bogroff is a Gentile in the third generation.

Supreme Court on Pistol Bill.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I observe in some quarters a doubt whether the Sullivan anti-weapon statute be not repugnant to the Fourteenth Amendment of the Federal Constitution, which forbids an abridgment of the privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States.

But in Walker vs. Sauvinet, 92 U. S. Reports 90, a case identical in principle, the Supreme Court, by Chief Justice Waite, says: "It is not a privilege or immunity of National citizenship which the States are forbidden by the Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States to abridge."

Would Check All Immigration.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have been a reader of your valued paper for just forty of the sixty years of its existence, and have never asked it to answer any foolish questions. I would now like to ask a question, however, and hope it may be considered sane and proper. It is this:

In view of the fact that so many of the foreigners coming to this country are of such a bad and dangerous character that our laws cannot control them, that their black-hand deviltry is constantly increasing, would it not be advisable, is it not absolutely necessary, that the bars should be put up for a few years at least, until we can "digest" what we have?

I am asking this question in good faith, and most earnestly request that you do not ignore it.

It seems to me of more importance than the reciprocity question. Believe me, there are thousands of your readers who would like your views upon this matter, as well as the views of a few of your correspondents.

Espied Another Comet.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

While stargazing at the Brooks comet last night, in the northwesterly sky, I found what appeared to be another comet in the eastern sky, almost overhead. Its size was about half that of the Brooks comet, and its short tail was pointed in the direction of the latter. It is barely visible to the naked eye, but plainly visible through a good field glass, and about half as brilliant as the Brooks comet.

It will be interesting to know from the astronomers who this stranger is, traveling, from the position of its tail, toward the Brooks comet. Or, is it an offshoot of the Brooks refusing to pass off into infinite space?

Trusting you may throw some light on this interesting September sky. I am,

TAFT SEES LOCKS OF BIG SOO CANAL

President Goes Through on Tug to Gain Idea of What Panama Will Be Like.

GREETS MANY CANADIANS

They Cross Border to See, as Some Wags Put It, "the Man Who Is Going to Annex Canada."

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich., Sept. 19.—After a run into the northern part of Michigan, President Taft turned aside from politics to-day and spent an afternoon in Sault Ste. Marie. He made a brief address to the people from in front of the local armory, but confined himself to local topics. He promised the people of "Lock City" that he would give his attention to the water power situation here and would see that the long-disputed subject was settled. Many of the industries of the city have been retarded by the restrictions upon the use of water.

Mr. Taft took a special interest in the great locks on the canal here. Thoroughly conversant with the work on the giant water lifts at Gatun and Pedro Miguel on the Panama Canal, the President was anxious to see some big locks in actual operation. So on board a tug he was dropped 19 feet through the biggest of the three locks, and saw a number of ships lifted from the lower level of Lakes Huron and Michigan to the surface waters of Lake Superior.

Soon after his arrival at noon the President headed a procession of over fifty automobiles through the streets of the city and was cheered vigorously. He was entertained at the home of Gov. Osborn, who met him at the train and attended a luncheon of citizens, where covers for 500 were land.

The President spent the late afternoon at Fort Brady, reviewed the United States troops there and had tea with Major and Mrs Sidney T. Cloman. He left shortly before 6 o'clock for Marquette, where he will spend the night.

Such a crowd as welcomed the President here had never been seen in the Soo before, and many had come by the special trains from great distances. A noticeable element in the assembly was the great number of Canadians who had crossed from the other side of the St. Mary's River to see, as many of them humorously put it, "the man who was going to annex Canada." He produced a profound impression on them with his genial smile and hearty handshake as he said: "A gentleman from Canada? Glad to meet you, Sir."

SOO JUNCTION, Mich., Sept. 19.—The special train bearing President Taft and his party passed through here shortly before 10 o'clock to-day. Coming across the straits of Mackinac this morning the President stood on the upper deck of the ferry for nearly an hour, so when he came out on the rear platform of his car at St. Ignace and at this place, he congratulated the people on the lung-filling breezes they enjoy.

The President to-day accepted an invitation of Chancellor Frank Strong of the University of Kansas, at Lawrence, supplemented by invitations from Gov. Stubbs, Senator Curtis, and Congressman Anthony to address the Y. M. C. A. students of the university Sunday.

The President to-day sent the following telegram to Mrs. Edmund H. Madison, wife of Congressman Madison, who died yesterday:

"I was deeply pained to learn at Detroit of the shocking death of Judge Madison. Allow me to express to you my sympathy in your great loss."

At Trout Lake Republican State Chairman Knox and State Senator Fowle of Michigan boarded the President's train to make the trip into the "Soo" with him.

TAFT HOLDS PACIFIC FLEET.

To Remain at San Francisco for Celebration When He Arrives.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—The Navy Department to-day ordered the Pacific fleet to postpone the Hawaiian cruise until after President Taft's visit to San Francisco Oct. 14 to attend the ground-breaking ceremonies of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition. This action, it is understood, was taken on instructions from the President.

The fleet was scheduled to sail for Honolulu on Oct. 1. As the postponement of the trip for more than two weeks will bring the time so close to the date for Fall target practice and manoeuvres, the Hawaiian cruise may be abandoned.

CHILD STOPS TAFT CAR.

Little Girl Flags It with Flowers for Him—To Have Letter.

DETROIT, Sept. 19.—A little girl in white, carrying a big bouquet of asters, held up the special car of the President of the United States yesterday, and in consequence is to have a letter of thanks to treasure and to hand down to her children. As the President's car was passing a point three miles beyond Royal Oak, on its way to Pontiac, the motorman spied a little figure dancing up and down on the track. President Taft was told, and he ordered the car stopped while he took the big bouquet from the tiny hands.

"Thank you, my little maid," said the President.

Then as the car resumed its way he turned to his secretary and said: "Please get that little girl's name. Perhaps she would like a letter of thanks."

Army to Number 89,000.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—The United States Army during the next fiscal year will number approximately 89,000 officers and men. At present the army numbers 76,954 enlisted men, 5,732 Philippine scouts, and 5,003 commissioner officers, a total of 88,089.

TO DIANA OF MADISON SQUARE.

Bye, bye, Diana! Sorry you must quit
Your lofty perch above the little Square!
You never shocked us—not a little bit—
We saw so much along Broadway less fair
Than you, who kicked so boldly into space
The while you pointed with untiring grace
More things to kick at, that you saw below.
A monstrous wonder that your bended bow
Did not let fly an arrow now and then!
We could have spared some women and some men
With far less loss than we can now spare you,
Who art so steadfast, lofty souled and true!
In days to come, perchance, 'twill be your lot
To gaze on us from some more dizzy height,
Or in some pedestaled, obscurer spot
Give of thy charms a nearer, dearer view.
What will seduce, as did your scarf-draped charms,
The earth-bound vision from its votive fires?
What fill the bill of graceful legs and arms
Poised in the blue, among lean, shapeless spires?
Bye, bye, Diana! Nothing shall efface
The pretty picture that we hoped would stay,
Kicking the clouds and turning low its face,
With undrawn bow, upon the Great White Way.

'THE WOMAN' GRIPS AND HAS A PURPOSE

A Splendid Play by William C. de Mille Dealing with Graft in Strong Dramatic Terms.

IT IS SUPERBLY ACTED

Mary Nash, John Cope, and Cuyler Hastings Leading Factors in Another Remarkable Belasco Production.

THE WOMAN, a play in three acts, by William C. de Mille. Republic Theatre.

The Hon. Jim Blake	John W. Cope
Tom, his son	Harold Vosburgh
The Hon. Mark Robertson	Edwin Holt
Grace, his wife	Jane Peyton
The Hon. Matthew Standish	Cuyler Hastings
Ralph Van Dyke	Carleton Macy
The Hon. Silas Gregg	Stephen Fitzpatrick
The Hon. Tim Neligan	William Holden
Wanda Kelly	Mary Nash

In writing the play "The Woman," which was presented at the Republic Theatre last night, with all the artistic finesse for which the name of David Belasco stands, William C. de Mille may not have been actuated by any special ethical intention. But the fact remains that anything which serves to bring home to the public conscience its own laxness in the conduct of public affairs and its own toleration of viciousness in party politics, may serve a larger purpose. And so "The Woman," though primarily a play which aims to be moving through the clash of its characters, exploited in the stress of moving situations, may have an added value. In a sense, then, Mr. De Mille, taking graft for his major theme, and stringing upon it such harmonies and discords as are needed to create theatrical effect, has written a play of value.

"The public," says the Hon. Jim Blake, representative from Illinois, in Mr. de Mille's play, "the public makes me sick." It is this same party leader who discourses with a fine cnyical appreciation of the attitude of this same public going down in worship to the returning boss from Ireland and welcoming him to the city with thanks for what he has left them of it. And Mr. Blake has no illusions on the subject of graft.

"Some day," he admits, "the public may wake up." That's why he is in a hurry to get all that he can get before it is too late.

In writing "The Woman" Mr. de Mille has been wise enough not to lose his temper. His grafters are human beings with very human elements in combination. And to a people with a sense of humor they are attractive here as they are in life through their sheer audacity.

The fictitious leader of the party that is trying to pass the Mullens bill—a bill that will make railway overcapitalization legal, and once again provide a means to milk the public—is the self-made man, successful by reason of his ability to wheedle, soothe, or bulldoze as the occasion may require. And it is through no mistake in his plan, through no false move on his own part that he is defeated in the end. But merely through the operation of circumstances that have been years in development.

The Hon. Matthew Standish, leader of the insurgents, who is striving to defeat the bill, is an unsmirched politician. He has attracted the attention of the country to the iniquity of the measure—has proclaimed it so loudly and so eloquently that for once the machine men hesitate; they are beginning to fear the effects upon their constituents of continued adherence to the crowd that is backing the measure. The object of the grafters now is to "get something on Standish." And they are fortunate enough to discover that some years before he had registered at a hotel with a woman not his wife. So far so good, but the story needs at least the substantiation of the woman's name.

Who is "the woman"?

This is the problem that confronts them—the problem that makes the play, that enables the author to build a series of situations rising to a big climax in a progressive crescendo of effect with just such passages of intervening calm as are needed to emphasize and hold.

The connecting link in the dramatic chain is a telephone girl in the lobby of a Washington hotel. And for the sentimental interest, and incidentally that the girl may not be entirely alone in the struggle which ensues, there is an attachment between her and Blake's young son.

Blake and the party leaders have a conference in the "Amen" corner of the hotel, at which the plan for besmirching Standish is broached, the crafty leader raising his voice so that the telephone girl may get the drift of what they are saying. Then he approaches her, tells her that Standish is shortly to arrive, and offers her a bribe to reveal to him, immediately after their conference is closed, the number called up by the insurgent. The girl is quick-witted, sees Blake's object, but makes no definite promise. Then Standish comes, attempts to brave it out, but the moment the leader goes out rushes to the phone, asks for a long-distance wire, and calls up a number, after having previously requested the girl to remove her own receiver.

The pulse of the drama and the clue to the woman's name as far as the audience is concerned come at the end of the first act, when the Hon. Mark Robertson, Representative from New York and a son-in-law of Blake, walks over to the 'phone and calls up his wife, giving the very number that Standish has used only a few moments before.

Here then is the key to the denoument, but not the means by which the key is to be fitted, nor the successive moves by which the telephone girl is to be the means of protecting the woman from the scandal, and of saving the father and the husband from disgrace which they will have brought upon themselves. You are prepared for the familiar cross-examination scene of the telephone girl after she has pulled out the plug and thus prevented the leader from getting news to the papers that will ruin Standish and turn the tide in favor of the supporters of the Mullen bill, but you are not prepared for the unfamiliarity of the method through which this cross-examination scene is conducted, with an intervening curtain to eliminate all the tedious unnecessary questioning that must precede a climax as the scene has ordinarily been accomplished.

Mr. de Mille has done a splendid piece of work. But it is no discredit to him to add that the resourcefulness and sensitiveness of David Belasco have undoubtedly contributed a large share to the values of his admirable play.

One only need to see the management of the scene of the hotel lobby to realize the master touch, to observe how all things are made to seem real, and yet to conform to the general dramatic plan, with no disconcerting intrusion of detail that is merely clever, but that serves no useful purpose. The mere handling of the telephone switch board in the first act, during scenes where it must be "busy" and might interrupt important matter, is in itself a lesson in stage management. And as the play is written and staged so it is acted in almost all of its parts with breadth and strength and meaning to the rôles.

For many the surprise of the night came in the wonderfully appealing performance of the telephone girl by Mary Nash, a young actress, whose best opportunity heretofore came in the Fitch play, "The City." Here Miss Nash plays a rôle which demands a broader variety of accomplishment—the sense of humor and good taste, with the natural touch, combined with the capacity for nervous concentration in the climax. It is easy to see how the first of these qualities only would have resulted in the familiar stage caricature had not the second quality been present to guide and restrain. Miss Nash's performance could not have been bettered—it is difficult, indeed, to imagine any other of our young actresses who would have had the requisite personality and the art to have equaled her in this part.

Again, John Cope, a splendid actor in character, had here broader opportunities that have hitherto befallen him. He certainly made the most of them. His portrait of the leader was rich in its natural and easy humor. It had authority and weight. It was, in short, a perfect picture of the man. The play held nothing finer than the characterization of the leader of the insurgents as Mr. Cuyler Hastings developed it, his nervous byplay under distress and his firm conveyance of consistent purpose being especially well done.

There was a notably efficient and effective individual performance by Edwin Holt and a particularly well-played passage in the last act by Mr. Carlton Macy.

The others were generally competent, though Miss Jane Peyton, except in occasional moments, was unable to give full expression to the important rôle of the woman in the case.

The enthusiasm, as is not unusual at the Belasco openings, was unbounded, and Mr. de Mille spoke briefly. But Mr. Belasco did not appear.

MORRIS U. ELY TO WED.

Young Brooklyn Banker and Politician Engaged to Miss Adams.

While Morris U. Ely, who is again seeking to become Republican leader of the First Assembly District, Brooklyn, hopes to defeat the forces of the veteran politician, Col. Michael J. The announcement was made of the engagement of Miss Ethel James Adams to Mr. Ely.

Miss Adams is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Horatio Mortimer Adams of 54 Montgomery Place, Brooklyn, and is one of the best-known members of the younger set of Brooklyn society. She is a sister of Mrs. Robert Gair, Jr., and a granddaughter of the late Darwin R. James.

WED IN NORMANDY TO-DAY.

Margaret Rutherfurd, Daughter of Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, and Ogden L. Mills.

Miss Margaret Rutherfurd, daughter of Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, Sr., and Ogden Livingston Mills, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ogden Mills, will be married to-day in the little chapel on the grounds of the seashore place at Deanville, Normandy, of William K. Vanderbilt, the bride's stepfather. This is one of the notable weddings of the Autumnal season, and one in which society both home and abroad are greatly interested.

Miss Rutherfurd is the elder of the two daughters of the late Louis Rutherfurd and niece of the late Rutherfurd Stuyvesant and his brother, Winthrop Rutherfurd, whose wife was Miss Alice Morton, daughter of Levi P. Morton. Her mother was a Miss Harriman, and is a sister of Mrs. Stephen H. Olin and of Mrs. Frederick Havemeyer.

Society was first made aware of the attachment between the young couple early last season, when it became known that Miss Rutherfurd was a patient at the Presbyterian Hospital and that Mr. Mills called at the hospital every day with flowers. Their engagement was rumored later, but was not confirmed until last June.

Mr. Mills is a graduate of Harvard, class of 1905, and has been practicing law in this city. He is a member of the Union, Racquet and Tennis, Meadow Brook, and Knickerbocker Clubs. Darius Ogden Mills, who died last year, was his grandfather. He is a brother of the Countess of Granard of London and Mrs. Henry C. Phipps.

He spent part of the Summer abroad with his fiancée, returning here in August with the Countess of Granard, and remained in Newport with his parents until he sailed on Sept. 7 for Europe. Mr. and Mrs. Mills sailed later. His best man today will be William O'D. Iselin. Miss Barbara Rutherfurd, who will probably be presented to society here this season, will act as her sister's maid of honor.

Many prominent people will attend the wedding. Ambassador and Mrs. Whitelaw Reid will be among the guests, having left London for Trouville on Monday.

Among other guests expected to be present are the Hon. and Mrs. John Ward, Mr. and Mrs. Winthrop Rutherfurd, Mr. and Mrs. Henry White, the latter an aunt of the bride, and Samuel S. Sands.

RUSSIAN DANCERS QUIT MISS HOFFMANN

SAY CONTRACT IS BROKEN

Principal Dancers in the Ballet "Les Sylphides" Leave for New York—Gertrude Hoffmann's Production.

Lydia Lopoukowa and Alexander Volinine, two of the principal Russian dancers who appeared here in Gertrude Hoffmann's "Saison des Ballets Russes," at the Winter Garden, quit the company in Minneapolis yesterday and are returning to New York. According to a telegram received late last night their action was taken because Miss Hoffmann introduced a vaudeville review into the entertainment, which, they say, is a breach of their contracts with the ballet management. The vaudeville number, according to the telegram, was introduced after the ballet "Les Sylphides," which was the second number of the programme at the Winter Garden.

Lopoukowa and Volinine were the principal dancers in the ballet "Les Sylphides," and during the earlier part of the engagement here Lopoukowa danced a bacchanale in "Cleopatre," and appeared as one of the three odalisques in "Sheherazade." An injury to her ankle last month caused her to omit the first and last numbers and prevented her from dancing at all for nearly two weeks.

Before the Russian ballet company went on tour both of these dancers expressed dissatisfaction. Public appreciation of the ballets in general had not been up to the expectation of the management and the dancers, and it was feared that out of New York it would be even less. The name of Gertrude Hoffmann, some thought, would be sufficient to attract attention in the cities where she was known as a vaudeville head-liner, but it would appear from the telegram that the audiences in Chicago last week, and in Minneapolis this, desired to have her in her vaudeville specialty rather than in company with Russian dancing artists.

It was Miss Hoffmann who conceived the idea of putting on the ballets in America, and largely her money that paid for the production. Scenic equipment and costuming were equal to those of the Russians who had appeared in Paris and Berlin, and the company had been organized with care.

Besides Lopoukowa and Volinine, who are acknowledged stars in Russia and in France as well as in this country, there were engaged others of the imperial Russian school, including Theodore Kosloff, Alexis Kosloff II., Alexis Bugiatov, and Maria Baldina. During the Summer vacation Alexis Kosloff returned to Europe without making his departure known, and when the season was resumed at the Winter Garden his place was taken by another dancer.

The managers of the enterprise for Miss Hoffmann are Comstock & Gest. Neither Mr. Gest nor Mr. Comstock could be found late last night.

MORDKIN'S DANCERS ARRIVE.

Fifty Russians in Company That Is to Appear at the Metropolitan.

Mikail Mordkin, the Russian dancer, who this year heads his own company, arrived with his company on the Hamburg-American liner President Lincoln last night. Anna Pavlowa, with whom Mordkin was associated when he appeared at the Metropolitan Opera House during the past season, is not a member of the company that arrived last night.

While Pavlowa does not accompany Mordkin, there is a strong probability that the famous pair will again dance together this season. Pavlowa is due in New York soon.

The three principal women members of Mordkin's ballet are Mlle. Vera Koralli, Mlle. Julia Siedlowa, and Mlle. Katarina Geltzer. This will be the first visit of either to the United States, and in the case of Mlle. Siedlowa it will be the first long leave of absence she has ever had from the Imperial Opera House in St. Petersburg. Mlle. Geltzer has been appearing the last Summer at the Alhambra in London. All three of these dancers are members of the ballet of the Imperial Opera in St. Petersburg, and all are graduates of the Mariensky Institute in St. Petersburg.

Mordkin's company numbers over fifty persons. On their arrival the company was met by a number of well known Russians. The opening performance of the company will be given in Newark on Oct. 17. The Metropolitan Opera House engagement begins Dec. 18.

NEW REVUE POSTPONED.

First Performance Next Wednesday Night—Auction Sale of Seats.

The opening of the new show, "The Revue of Revues," at the Winter Garden has been postponed from next Monday until Wednesday night, in order to allow of more dress rehearsals of the piece. An auction sale of seats for the first night will be held on Friday afternoon at the Casino Theatre, where there will be an orchestra to supply music between the efforts of the auctioneers. The first box will be sold by Mlle. Gaby Deslys, and the sellers will include Maud Raymond, Dorothy Jardon, Kate Elinore, Lydia Barry, Robert Warwick, Charles Bigelow, Eva Davenport, Flora Zabelle, and Elsa Ryan.

Among the features of the new Winter Garden entertainment, besides the first American appearance of Gaby Deslys, will be a Japanese ballet about which much secrecy is being observed.

Forbes-Robertson Returns in October.

Johnston Forbes-Robertson and his company that is to play "The Passing of the Third Floor Back" this season will sail from England on Oct. 14 on the Campania of the Cunard Line. Mr. Forbes-Robertson's niece, Maud Buchanan, will play the rôle of Stacia, the slavey, this season in place of Mollie Pearson. Otherwise the company will be practically the same as last year.

Among the passengers who arrived on the North German Lloyd liner Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse yesterday was Miss Lilla Ormond, the young American prima donna, who will this year sing in concert under the management of R. E. Johnston. Miss Ormond will make an extended tour. She will be one of the soloists at the forthcoming Maine Festival at Bangor.

Burke, Gladys Hanson, Hattie Russell, Elizabeth Fagan, Helena van Brugh, Gilda Varesi, Edwalyn O'Connell, and Anne Bradley.

Miss Chase will continue in the part until the annual engagement of "Peter Pan" at the Duke of York's Theatre Christmas night.

A quartet of Spanish dancers, known as "Los Malaganitas," arrived on the Niagara from Havre yesterday to make their American debut with the new Winter Garden entertainment next week.

SUFFRAGISTS ENLIVEN FAIR.

Crowd at White Plains Hears Campaign Shouts—Governor's Visit.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Sept. 19.—Society folk who attended the opening of the Westchester County Fair at the White Plains Fair Grounds to-day were surprised to find several tents near the "Midway," in charge of delegates of the Westchester County Woman's Suffrage Association, who addressed the crowds that gathered on the question of equal rights for the sex.

This was a new feature of the fair, and attracted much attention. Several big touring cars draped with streamers bearing the words "The Woman Voters" and "Votes for Women," and containing pretty girls, were driven about the fair grounds, their occupants giving away printed matter, while a fair young damsel shouted through a megaphone, "Come on, come over to the women's tent!" Mrs. Jessica Garretson Finch of New York spoke on woman's suffrage.

"Some of you think that votes will do us no good," shouted the speaker, "but I say the right to vote will do us a lot of good, and we are going to win out. When will our votes count? When a woman is 35 or 40 years of age and her daughters go out into the world, then the woman's vote will count."

Mrs. Walston Hill Brown, President of the Metropolitan Auxiliary of the New York Child Labor Committee, daughter of the late Robert G. Ingersoll, and her two children, Eva and Robert, rode to the fair grounds in a big limousine, and immediately went to the woman's suffrage tent. She carried an armful of circulars and many lead pencils for the use of signers of the suffrage petition. Other prominent women around the tent were Mrs. William L. Colt of Bronxville, Mrs. Bishop Putnam of Rye, Mrs. Henry Villard of Dobbs Ferry, Miss Burritt, and Mrs. Pierce Bailey. In an interview Mrs. Walston Hill Brown spoke of the work of the women.

"We are all united in working for better child labor and compulsory education laws," said she. "We have had a bill introduced which will give us the right to examine the condition of tenements, and we are anxious also to have a bill passed which will restrict the working of girls from 16 to 21 years of age to not more than fifty-four hours a week. We wish also to eliminate the dark rooms and sweatshops in the tenements, which I believe breed criminals. We think it would be better to provide better houses for the poor than to keep many of them in the penitentiary. This is why women want the right to vote, so that we can protect the women and children."

The fair this year is better than ever. Several "millionaire farmers" have entered cattle, vegetables, and flowers. Oliver Harriman, the banker, and George Fordyce Leith, who jointly own a farm, have exhibits of hogs and cattle. A. H. Smith, General Counselor of the New York Central Railroad Company, has entered mulefoot hogs and prize-winning Dorset sheep and cattle. Several other wealthy New Yorkers who have country homes in Westchester have entries, and the contest for blue ribbons is keen.

The horse show, which is held in conjunction with the fair, will commence on Wednesday afternoon. There are sixty classes, and many high-steppers have been entered. Gov. and Mrs. Dix will attend on Thursday afternoon as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Harriman. They will spend Wednesday night as the guests of William H. Catlin of Rye, State Highway Commissioner. On Thursday they will come over the road in a four-in-hand to White Plains. On Thursday evening they will be entertained at a reception of the Knollwood Country Club. They will spend the night with Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Harriman at their country estate in Purchase.

MISS RUNNELLS ENGAGED.

Daughter of Pullman Company President to Wed Son of Late Prof. James.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Sept. 19.—Miss Alice Rutherford Runnells, daughter of John S. Runnells, President of the Pullman Company, and William James of Cambridge, Mass., son of the late Prof. William James of Harvard University, whose psychical researches caused much comment before his death, are to be married soon. The announcement of their engagement was made to-day by Mr. and Mrs. Runnells.

Mr. and Mrs. Runnells and their daughter returned only a few days ago from Chocorua, N. H., in the White Mountains, where they passed most of the Summer at their country place, Willow Gate.

Miss Runnells made her début several years ago and has since been prominent in the younger set. She is tall, fair haired, of decidedly athletic build, and is exceptionally fond of outdoor sports.

When Mrs. Harold McCormick originated the plan of the afternoon promenade through Lincoln Park last Spring, Miss Runnells, together with Miss Ethel Hooper, herself soon to be a bride; Miss Anita Blair, Miss Katherine McFaden, and Miss Eleanor Hamill was among the most enthusiastic and appeared at Lincoln Park every week for her walk.

Prof. James, father of the young man who will wed Miss Runnells, announced before his death that he would attempt to return to this world in spirit form and communicate through spiritualistic mediums with his friends and fellow-students of psychical phenomena. He has not been heard from yet.

GIVES DANCE FOR SERVANTS.

Mrs. French Vanderbilt Entertains with a Supper at Harbourview.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 19.—Mrs. French Vanderbilt gave to her servants at Harbourview Monday night a dance with supper. The servants of Mrs. Vanderbilt have long been in her employ, and with their friends the evening was a merry one. The large laundry was transformed into a ballroom with flags, bunting, and plants. The supper was in the large dining room of the servants' cottage, which was decorated.

About 100 enjoyed the dancing, with music by Hodgson's orchestra. Whist for prizes was another feature of the entertainment. Mrs. Vanderbilt is visiting her mother, Mrs. F. O. French, in Tuxedo.

JAMES I. M'CALLUM TO MARRY AGAIN

Divorced Husband of Miss Mary Sherman to Wed Miss Violette Lockwood of New York.

FIRST WIFE WAS HEIRESS

Adopted Daughter of Secretary of State Sherman Inherited His Millions—Freed from Mr. McCallum in 1910.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 19.—The engagement was announced to-day of Miss Violette Lockwood to James Iver McCallum of Washington. They will be married Oct. 10. Miss Lockwood is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Lockwood of New York, and granddaughter of the late Joshua McCay, who was a partner of William T. Walters, father of Henry Walters, the noted art collector.

Mr. McCallum has long been a target of the social limelight in the District of Columbia, and this is his second flight in the aeroplane of romance. In 1897 he became the husband of Miss Mary Sherman, adopted daughter of John Sherman, then Secretary of State. Before the wedding Mr. McCallum was a clerk in the Supreme Court, but immediately afterward he received a $2,000-a-year appointment in the Foreign Office, and later was sent as Consul to a European city.

Not long after the return of Mr. and Mrs. McCallum to America Mr. Sherman died, and his adopted daughter was the sole heir to his several millions. This led to a suit in which Phillips Lee Goldsborough, Collector of Internal Revenue for Maryland and the District of Columbia, and now Republican candidate for Governor, was the defendant. Mrs. McCallum sought to avoid paying an inheritance tax, as she was not Mr. Sherman's descendant by blood. She lost.

Following this Mrs. McCallum was reported to have settled bonds upon her husband which netted him an income of several thousand dollars a year. Some years later Mrs. McCallum began suit for absolute divorce. On March 5, 1910, the decree was granted, with the mother being given custody of the two children, John Sherman and Cecilia Sherman McCallum.

Atlantic City has often seen Mr. McCallum, and it was there that he wooed Miss Lockwood, whom he had first met at Chevy Chase.

Miss Cozzens to Wed J. D. Dusenberry.

Mr. and Mrs. John B. Cozzens of 307 West Eighty-seventh Street have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Anna Beatrice Cozzens, to James Dudley Dusenberry, son of Charles Dusenberry, Jr., of Tuckahoe, N. Y.

Miss Cozzens is a great-granddaughter of William B. Cozzens, both Cozzens and Dusenberry being old New York families. Mr. Dusenberry is a graduate of Princeton, class of '10.

The couple's engagement was announced last night at a dinner and theatre party given by Mr. and Mrs. Cozzens.

Miss Bossert to Wed C. T. Cooney.

Announcement was made yesterday that Miss Biennie Bossert, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Bossert of the Hotel Bossert, Brooklyn Heights, and Carroll Trowbridge Cooney, also of Brooklyn, are to be married on Oct. 14. The wedding will take place at the Summer home of the Bossert family at Bay Shore, L. I., which was formerly the country estate of James Hazen Hyde. Miss Bossert is one of the most popular girls in the Bay Shore colony of Summer residents, and is an exhibitor at the annual horse show there.

Mr. Cooney won fame as an athlete while at Yale. He was a member of the university football team and a crack hammer thrower. He was graduated last year. Mr. Cooney is the son of John J. Cooney of 657 St. Mark's Avenue, Brooklyn.

Miss Smyth and J. H. Cowles Engaged.

The engagement has been announced of Miss Anna Augusta Smyth, daughter of the late Justice Frederick Smyth, who was Recorder of New York City for many years, to John H. Cowles, a lawyer of Montreal, Canada. The wedding will take place in this city early next Spring, and the couple will reside in Montreal.

Miss Smyth received $110,000 by the will of her father, who died in August, 1900, being the only surviving member of the family.

To-day's Weddings.

Miss Cornelia V. R. Robb and Daniel F. Downs, Jr., will be married to-day at the home of the bride, 23 Park Avenue. The bride's brother, Nathaniel Thayer Robb, will give her in marriage. She will have no attendants. Herbert S. Downs will act as best man. The ceremony will be performed at noon in the presence of relatives and a few intimate friends, by the Rev. Dr. W. W. Battershall of Albany and the Rev. Hugh Birckhead of St. George's Church, this city.

In Tannersville, N. Y., to-day Miss Elisabeth Morse Colgate, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Colgate of this city, will be married to Lieut. Stanley M. Rumbough, Fifteenth Cavalry, U. S. A.

Miss Josephine Bulkley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Justis Lawrence Bulkley of 787 Madison Avenue, and Henry Benedict Taylor of Oakland, Cal., will be married at 4 o'clock this afternoon in the ladies' annex of the Metropolitan Club

Arthur J. Horgan.

Arthur J. Horgan, widely known as an architect who several years ago did much of the city's building, died at the Delwood Hotel, Purling, N. Y., on Sunday of heart disease. He was 43 years old. Mr. Horgan distinguished himself at the age of 19 by his work in church designing, and at the age of 20 began a partnership with Vincent J. Slattery that lasted until a year ago. The firm was the official firm of architects for the New York Fire Department, and built besides many fire houses, the Harlem Hospital, the Hall of Records, and the sanitarium of Sailors' Snug Harbor. Mr. Horgan leaves a widow and four children.

GEN. ANTENOR FIRMIN DEAD.

Revolutionist Once Proclaimed President of Haiti, but Driven Into Exile.

ST. THOMAS, D. W. I., Sept. 19.—Gen. Antenor Firmin, who deserted his post as Haitian Minister at London to help overthrow President Simon of Haiti, died here to-day.

Firmin led one of the two revolutionary parties and was a candidate for the Presidency in succession to Simon. However, Gen. Leconte, the other revolutionary chief, was the first to reach Port au Prince after the success of the revolution had been assured, and he assumed the Presidency before Firmin could muster sufficient strength to give him a fighting chance at the capital.

For a time a conflict between the followers of Leconte and the adherents of Firmin was feared, but on Aug. 4, two days after Simon had left Port au Prince, Firmin, who had remained on board a vessel in the harbor of Port au Prince, sailed for this city, where he had since remained.

Gen. Firmin fought for years to satisfy an ambition which he appears to have abandoned when last August he turned his back on his native country and followed into practical exile his former chief, whom he had helped to overthrow to his own disadvantage. Firmin was a man of considerable education and culture. He was the author of a book entitled "President Roosevelt and Haiti."

In the Spring of 1902, following the resignation of President Sam and the establishment of a Provisional Government, a revolutionary movement in favor of Firmin developed, and in July he was proclaimed President at Artabonite. His tenure of office was very brief, civil war following his assumption of office. He was driven into exile by Gen. Nord Alexis, who assumed the office of President in the following October. He later conspired against Nord Alexis, but when the latter was finally deposed Firmin arrived in Haiti only to find Gen. Simon already installed as President. He made the best of the situation and accepted from Simon the Mission of Haitian Minister to Great Britain.

With the outbreak of the most recent revolution he left London suddenly, giving as an excuse that his salary had not been paid. He was at once proclaimed a traitor by Simon and forbidden to reenter Haiti.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Renewed Liquidation Carries Several Issues to New Low Records.

GERMAN BANK RATE UP

Bank of England Expected to Increase Its Rate Next Week.

Yesterday's stock market opened under pressure of selling orders from abroad, which resulted in lower prices for all the active issues. London, which had been a buyer on the three previous days, sent over a fair volume of selling orders yesterday, and there was little support to take care of them. The pressure was relieved at the end of a half hour and the market developed a firmer undertone, without, however, the assistance of any large buying orders. At the end of the first three hours the market was still very narrow, and a large number of issues ordinarily fairly active had not been dealt in.

Although it had been generally expected that yesterday would see an advance in the rate of discount of the Imperial Bank of Germany from 4 to 5 per cent., when this action occurred it was made the basis of a further bear movement, on the ground that it indicated stringent money conditions at Berlin. It was predicated that the Bank of England's rate would be advanced next Thursday, when the Directors meet.

Whatever improvement in sentiment followed the practical assurance of a settlement on terms satisfactory to England, Germany, and France of the troublesome Moroccan dispute was more than offset yesterday by the reports of fresh labor outbreaks in Spain and Austria. Wall Street had not fully realized the extent of Europe's industrial unrest, and it became evident that the Moroccan question was only one of a number of factors which have stood in the way of prosperity abroad. Fresh discussion of the possibilities of further disturbances to business if the Sherman law is to be invoked against a number of important industrial companies which have been named as being in much the same situation as the International Harvester Company and the United States Steel Corporation proved a further cause for discouragement in many quarters. President Taft's announcement that he still believed in the value of a strict interpretation of the Sherman law's prohibitions was taken to mean that business must face a recurrence of the evils attending unrestrained competition. There was a disposition among brokers, at least, to concede without argument that not only will suit be brought to dissolve the Steel Corporation but that the prosecution will be attended with success, from a Government standpoint. It was suggested that only the passage of the President's proposed Federal incorporation law would save the corporation from dissolution proceedings, and that such an escape would be attended by the surrender of many advantages enjoyed under the present organization. The International Harvester Company, it was rumored, might not wait to be brought to the bar, but would voluntarily offer to reorganize itself in accordance with the ideas of the Department of Justice.

It was reported that international banking houses with headquarters in New York had loaned $20,000,000 to Germany at 5½ per cent., a rate which Berlin is offering for three-month loans. It was pointed out by some of the bankers that the United States had not only been able to buy back such American stocks as Germany had been forced to sell, but had been able to loan her brokers considerable money as well.

Transactions in steel reached a very large volume, and resulted in breaking the price of the issue to the lowest point for more than a year. International Harvester and Amalgamated Copper likewise touched new low points. The decline in British consols to a still lower record was not considered particularly significant, in view of the possibilities of larger returns from other securities which have compelled many holders to sacrifice consols even in the absence of a good demand.

OUTSIDE SECURITIES

Stocks Move Irregularly, with Minor Price Changes on the Curb.

MANY COPPERS UNCHANGED

Several of the Prominent Issues Close Even with the Opening Levels—Cobalts Firm, but Sluggish.

Curb stocks moved irregularly yesterday, and except in scattered issues trading was in small volume. Giroux and Ray Central showed some strength, although the balance of the coppers were practically stationary. The former rose from 3⅞ to 4, closing at 3 15-16. The latter sold 1,200 from 1¼ up to 1 5-16. Braden, Butte Coalition, Inspiration, and Ohio were unchanged. Greene-Cananea sold off from 6⅛ to 6 on sales of 400. The Cobalts were irregular. Kerr Lake reported no sales. Nipissing rose from 8 to 8⅛, receding again to the opening level, and La Rose advanced from 4 to 4 1-16. Only three bond issues appeared in the trading, and these, after minor fluctuations, closed even with the opening levels.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE.

Liquidation in volume again manifested itself on the Consolidated Stock Exchange. Prices opened lower, rallied, and then weakened once more, with the volume of dealings increasing heavily as the decline proceeded. Of the total sales of 95,090 shares, distributed over a list of forty-six different stocks, nearly 60 per cent. of the business was done in the final two hours. European happenings exerted an unfavorable influence when the market opened, particularly the advance in the German bank rate from 4 to 5 per cent., the continued suspense over the Moroccan negotiations, and the labor outbreaks.

Conservative Investment
THERE is no greater incentive towards thrift and economy than that induced by conservative investment. It is a mistake to imagine, however, that conservative investment is to be determined by surface conditions alone. Margin of safety, stability of earnings, marketability, interest rates and other important factors all have a bearing upon safe and profitable investment.

BREWERY RECEIVER SET BACK

Court Won't Allow His Certificates to Issue Ahead of Bonds.

William Hobby, the receiver of the Westchester County Brewery of Mount Vernon, received a setback yesterday when Supreme Court Justice Tompkins denied his application to issue $47,000 in receivers' certificates to pay interest on bonds and the license fees of saloons and hotels which the brewery controls. The application was opposed by the Empire Trust Company, which holds a $250,000 mortgage on the brewery. Justice Tompkins said:

"The court undoubtedly has power to authorize the issuing of certificates of indebtedness by a receiver of a private business corporation, but I have reached the conclusion that the court has no power to issue such certificates of indebtedness, a lien upon the real property of the corporation ahead of the mortgage, which is held by a trustee to secure the bondholders.

"I must, therefore, deny the motion for lack of power to grant it, unless the bondholders or some one duly authorized to act for them, consent to the making of such an order."

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Some of the Fallen Stocks.

Although American Snuff, at the low record price yesterday, 225, was off 25 points since the last sale, which was made on July 17, the dividend has since been paid, which reduces the loss to 17½ points. The interim between has seen all of the declines in the general market from the high levels of July. The sale of 100 shares of Des Moines & Fort Dodge preferred, one of the leased roads of the Hawley system, represented a decline of 50 points since the last previous sale on the board. That last sale at 90 was, however, made on Dec. 24, 1908. Since then the dividend, which had been paid at the rate of 5 per cent. annually from 1904 to the Summer of 1909, has been discontinued. The sale, therefore, besides covering the recent decline in the market, represents the passage of the shares out of the dividend-paying class. Some confusion was occasioned yesterday by a queer error in one of the standard reference periodicals, which credited the stock with having paid 10 per cent. in 1910-11. The majority common stock of the road is owned by the Minneapolis & St. Louis, which leases the road.

Low Records.

United States Steel common at its low price yesterday, 65, was lower than it has been at any time since July, 1910. The low price of last year was 61⅛, reached in July, when the liquidation incidental to the difficulties of the Pearson-Farquhar Syndicate influenced the market. There were a number of other new low records yesterday, which included Amalgamated Copper at 53¾, Bethlehem Steel at 27½, International Harvester at 100¾, Republic Iron and Steel preferred at 87⅞. 'Frisco first preferred at 59, United States Pipe preferred at 45, and Wells Fargo at 140.

Weakness in Copper.

The weakness in Amalgamated reflected the general belief that the large buying power of Europe, particularly of Germany, is at least temporarily curtailed by the business reaction now under way in that country. Predictions that the next Copper Producers' Association report will show an increase are based largely on these conditions, since shipments to Europe, which played a large part in the reductions in stocks, put a better face on the situation in the preceding months of this year. The decline in copper sentiment is strikingly illustrated in yesterday's quotations from Boston, which showed Calumet and Hecla selling at 390, the lowest price since 1897, fourteen years ago. In that year the price went as low at 326. Ten years later, in 1907, before the panic, the stock sold as high as $1,000 a share.

Wage Cuts Predicted.

Steel men have about given up hope of any material stiffening of prices this Fall, and the opinion is generally expressed that a continuance of the present rock-bottom basis will have the inevitable result of wage reductions. There is already a considerable surplus of unemployed skilled labor, and the glut of common labor on the market has been shown clearly enough by the recent statistics of steerage travel, showing a preponderance of eastward movement only paralleled by the exodus which occurred after the panic of 1907. The steel plants, however, continue to run at a comfortable percentage of capacity, and labor liquidation in this industry is more likely from present indications to take the form of reductions in pay than laying off of men. Steel products on the average are now about $7 a ton below the prices prevailing in 1907, and this reduction has been made without any such cuts in labor prices as accompanied the price war of 1909. Reductions in the wage scale are not looked for as an immediate consequence of present low prices, but steel men said yesterday that they would be bound to come unless improvement 's seen before the turn of the year.

⁂

Cotton Shippers Obdurate.

So much difficulty has been encountered in getting the New York banks to agree to the plan of the Liverpool committee for safeguarding cotton bills of lading that attention has been rather drawn away from the fact that the crux of the problem really rests with the cotton shippers. Opposition to the central bureau and validating scheme has been growing among them, and at the conference held on Monday in New Orleans at the instance of the local Cotton Exchange, resolutions were adopted saying the cotton interests would not only refuse to comply with the central bureau requirements, but would organize among their several constituencies "a militant resistance to the proposed reflection upon the honor of the Southern cotton merchants." At the conference were delegates from most of the important cotton-shipping centres of the South, and the future course of the campaign carried on by the British cotton buyers will be watched with interest.

Consols Still Declining.

The price of British consols, which has been steadily declining since last April, got down yesterday to 76¾, the lowest since 1831, when the price was 74¾. For the lowest price on record it is necessary to go back to 1798, when they were quoted at 47¼. This was following the panic year of 1797, when the Bank of England suspended specie payment. In 1792, the year of the coalition with France, they had touched 97, and in 1737 107. Up to 1888 consols paid 3 per cent., from then to 1903 2¾ per cent., and since that time 2½ per cent. The highest point on record, 114, was reached in 1896, during the free silver campaign in the United States. The recent decline is attributed to the reluctance of investors to accept the low return with so many standard securities in the market that pay a higher rate. Big holders are said to be unloading, and a further fall is predicted.

DIVIDENDS ANNOUNCED.

Nickel's Quarterly Up to 4 Per Cent.—Westmoreland Coal Pays More.

Among the dividend announcements yesterday were two at increased rates and one at a recession. The International Nickel Company declared a dividend for the quarter of 4 per cent. on its common stock, payable Dec. 1 to stockholders of record Nov. 15, which compares with recent quarterly dividends of 2½ per cent. The Westmoreland Coal Company, in declaring a semi-annual dividend of 3½ per cent., has increased the disbursement 1 per cent. over the last payment. The dividend is payable Oct. 1 to stockholders of record Sept. 19. Last April the 10 per cent. annual rate was cut to 5 per cent., chiefly because of strike losses.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

Harry Bronner has resigned from the board of the Pope Manufacturing Company. He explained that the company no longer needed the backing of Hallgarten & Co., whom he represented on the board.

The Bangor & Arostook Railroad has sold to Brown Brothers $125,000 5 per cent. equipment bonds. These bonds are of Series E and are identical in terms with the last preceding issue, D. The entire issue has been resold by Brown Brothers.

The Stock Exchange has listed these securities: Houston Belt & Terminal Railway Company, $2,070,000 first mortgage 5 per cent. coupon bonds, due 1937; $430,000 to be added on notice of sale, making the total listed, $4,725,000. Granby Consolidated Mining, Smelting and Power Company, Ltd., $150,000 capital stock, making the total listed $15,000,000.

STOCKS OUT OF TOWN

DECLINES IN CHICAGO

Sears-Roebuck Heaviest Issue in That Market—Philadelphia Shares Firm, While Boston Coppers Sag.

Trading in the principal out-of-town markets showed an irregular tendency yesterday. In Chicago the local issues were weak, while in Philadelphia the opposite tendency prevailed. Boston coppers were weak. Lower prices as a rule marked trading on the Chicago Stock Exchange. Weakness in Sears-Roebuck common was the most pronounced feature, that issue selling off from a heavy opening at 132⅛ to 130½, the poorest for the day, at the close. There were smaller recessions in Swift and the Can shares, but Carbon and People's Gas scored slight advances. Commonwealth Edison, after selling higher, eased off.

Another substantial advance was recorded in the General Asphalt stocks on the Philadelphia Exchange yesterday. The fact was brought to light that for the first time in several years the company had received local paving contracts, and is now doing work approximating a rate of about $5,000 per day. The common stock promptly rose almost 2 points to 34¾, while the preferred also extended its recent advances substantially. On the whole, the Philadelphia market displayed firmness in face of the irregularity of the New York list, and, although at intervals there was a good deal of selling of United States Steel, the other arbitrage shares held well until the last hour.

The news that indictments had been brought against the officials of the United Shoe Machinery Company resulted in a reaction in that stock yesterday in Boston. Calumet and Hecla went down to 390, the lowest price at which it has sold since 1897, when it went as low as 326. The coppers as a class were dull, but they were somewhat affected by the weakness of Amalgamated. Telephone went up to 136.

The market was heavy in Baltimore and the price tendency was downward, an exception being United Railways 4s, which advanced nearly a point.

Yesterday's transactions on the various out-of-town Exchanges, as reported to THE NEW YORK TIMES, were as follows:

THE EUROPEAN MARKETS.

Increase in German Bank Rate and Other Factors Cause Weakness.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—Money was plentiful, but discount rates were dearer to-day.

The rise in the German bank rate and the growing expectation of an advance in the rate here on Thursday caused general offerings on the Stock Exchange. Gilt-edged securities declined and Consols sold off five-sixteenths to 76 13-16, a new low record. Paris offered its specialties freely, and in the absence of suport the markets closed weak. Mexican rails were firm exceptions.

American securities opened irregular and later in the forenoon declined on realizing. The weak Wall Street opening caused another break in prices, but the market recovered in the late trading and closed steady.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Fob Chains Imported for Advertising Purposes Not Entitled to Lower Duty.

In overruling a claim filed by A. H. Post & Co., the Board of United States General Appraisers has decided that fob chains, composed of brass, which after being plated with gold or silver are intended for free distribution for advertising purposes, are articles designed to be worn on or about the person for ornament or display. It is accordingly held that they are dutiable at compound rates equivalent to 85 per cent. on their value under the terms of the Tariff act of 1909.

Paragraph 448, under which the Collector assessed duty, provides for brass chains, whether finished or unfinished. Judge Sharretts says it is manifest that the importers base their claim that duty should have been assessed on the chains at the rae of 45 per cent. under the metal schedule, on the theory that articles intended for gratuitous distribution are not included in the paragraph under which assessment was made. The decision says that the board does not agree with the soundness of this contention. Judge Fischer says:

"It might be argued with as much force that advertising goods not intended for sale when imported are exempt from the exaction of any duty. Such is not the case, however. All imports, unless otherwise stipulated in the law, are subject to duty at the rate most specifically provided therefor, and it only remains to be determined whether brass watch chains designed for advertising purposes are also designed to be worn as wearing apparel or carried on or about or attached to the person. The importers' witness testified that such was their intended use, and his admission, we think, disposes of the whole question at issue. The protest is overruled, the Collector's decision being affirmed."

The Board has taken adverse action on a protest filed by F. H. Shallus of Baltimore regarding the classification under the present Tariff act of gun metal mesh bags. They were returned for duty at 85 per cent. as being articles intended to be worn on the person for the purpose of adornment. The contention of the importer was that they fall within the purview of the metal schedule with a tax of only 45 per cent. ad valorem. This claim the board denies.

Eugene Munsell & Co. were successful in a controversy dealing with the classification of rough trimmed mica. The assessment was at the rate of 10 cents a pound and 20 per cent. ad valorem as mica manufactured. The claim was that the mica is unmanufactured, and should be allowed to enter at 5 cents a pound and 20 per cent. on the value. This claim the board sustains and reverses the customs officials.

J. P. MORGAN SUED ON A RAILWAY DEAL

His Banking Firm Made Defendant in a $200,000 Attachment Involving the C., H. & D.

BOSTON BROKERS' ACTION

Litigation Grows Out of the Purchase of 110,000 Shares of the Pere Marquette Stock.

Supreme Court Justice Gavegan granted an attachment for $200,000 yesterday against the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton Railway Company, an Ohio corporation, in favor of Charles A. Bruce and the Corporation Organization and Audit Company. The attachment is on an assigned claim of F. H. Prince & Co., brokers, of Boston. Mr. Bruce is Treasurer of the audit company.

The attachment was granted on the ground that the defendant is a foreign corporation and copies were served on the Central Trust Company, the Bankers' Trust Company, and J. P. Morgan & Co.

The case grows out of the purchase by the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton of 110,000 shares of common stock of the Père Marquette Railroad in 1904. Prince & Co. obtained the stock for the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton at $125 a share and agreed to accept cash or to take $75 in bonds and $50 in common stock of the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton in payment.

Some bonds and stock were taken in payment, it is alleged, and $250,000 was paid to the brokers as commission for the sale. A further compensation was to be settled on by a committee to decide on the exact amount and eventually this extra award was placed at $285,000.

In 1905 this amount was still unpaid, and the Board of Directors of the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton arranged a compromise at $200,000, to be paid off whenever Prince & Co. could place proof before H. B. Hollins & Co., fiscal agents here for the railroad, that they had suffered a $90,000 loss on the bonds taken in part payment for the Père Marquette stock.

Such proof was laid before the agents, it is alleged, but the $200,000 has remained unpaid.

The Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton, which went into the hands of a receiver in 1905, adjusted its finances and resumed possession of its own properties in August, 1909. In the course of reorganization it disassociated itself from the Père Marquette, annulling the lease and agreeing to settle all outstanding difficulties between the two companies by arbitration.

VAN SCHAICK & CO. COMING UP

Assignee Announces That Failed Brokerage Firm Can Resume Business.

Van Schaick & Co., the Stock Exchange house of 7 Wall Street, which made an assignment last week, may resume business within a month after settling its obligations. These friends of John B. Van Schaick and Derby Crandall, the partners, stand ready to put up about $200,000, it was said. The firm is one of the oldest Stock Exchange houses in Wall Street.

THE COMMODITY MARKETS.

WHEAT—Prices fluctuated erratically during the session, with the opening steady, followed by a period of depression, with a sharp rally, however, in the late afternoon, establishing net gains for the day. It was apparent that selling was overdone early, and as a result of the limited outside business and narrow markets an oversold condition was easily brought about.

News of the day was not of a character stimulating to activity, with disposition to curtail commitments pending the outcome of the Canadian election to-morrow. Opinions as to the probable passage of the proposed agreement are very much mixed, but it seems as though the measure is expected to be ratified by a slight majority. As to the effect of the agreement in the event of its passage, there is also a wide diversity of expression.

Foreign news was mainly bearish, with Russian offerings liberal and the Continental markets depressed offsetting the steady tone of Liverpool. Foreign crop conditions are generally favorable, and the demand for American wheat from importing countries is practically nil. On the other hand, food riots at Vienna and political disturbances in Spain are not bearish factors.

Bradstreet's report showed a good increase in the world's visible amounting to 5,650,000 bushels, against 1,298,000 increase last week. World's wheat stocks at present are 142,000,000 bushels, against 140,000,000 bushels last year. European wheat stocks, however, are only 79,000,000 bushels against 93,000,000 bushels last year. The weekly Government report on conditions in the Spring wheat belt was generally favorable, and the weather in both the American and Canadian Northwest was more settled, which will tend to facilitate movement and check deterioration accounts concerning quality of wheat in the fields.

Cash No. 2 red quoted at 97¼c, elevator, export basis, and 98¾c free on board, afloat, for export; No. 2 hard, $1.02¾; No. 1 Northern Spring, $1.10½; No. 1 Northern Maintoba, $1.08¼.

CORN—There was decided pressure in the market at various times, with further liquidation. Selling was inspired by claims of a diminution in the cash and export demand, while prospective clearing weather, it was thought, would result in a more liberal movement and hasten the maturity of the plant. On the break there were reports about 400,000 bushels of corn taken by foreign interests, but part of this business transpired late Monday. The advance in wheat had some effect in inducing a scattered demand from shorts late in the session. Cash No. 2 Western quoted at 74½c elevator, domestic basis, and 74c free on board, afloat, for export.

OATS—Prices yielded during the early part of the day with other grain, but pressure was not in large volume. Operations are restricted by the proximity of the Canadian election, although bulls confidently assert that even though the reciprocity measure passes, the effect in oats circles will not be important. Cash standards quoted at 49c; No. 2 white, 49¼c; No. 3 white, 48½c.

PROVISIONS—Liquidation continues, and a decline to low prices for the movement was scored. Hog receipts are moderate, although sufficient for requirements. Packing interests were covering shorts, but rallying power displayed was feeble.

COTTONSEED OIL.

There was a good recession during the early trade on reports of further easing in the crude situation. Lower cotton and lard markets were not without influence, but on the decline in oil, there was fair bull support. Strength of the spot situation again manifested itself and although it is believed that September shorts have fairly well covered, there are still predictions of higher prices, due to the rapid absorption of spot oil. At the close a greater part of the early loss has been regained with the undertone firm. Crude was quoted at 480 to 487, being still too high for profitable hedging.

COTTON.

Initial prices were from 1 to 5 points advance, the result of steady Liverpool advices, but these levels proved to be the highs of the session. The tendency of the market was decidedly downward, and activity was greater and the declines more severe than for several weeks. Considerable short covering was reported at the recessions, but notwithstanding this the close was at the low with the resiliency shown by the market rather unimportant.

Hedge pressure from the South was in large volume. It was intimated that buyers of spot cotton at Southern points were alarmed at the tendency of the local market, and were disposed to hedge considerable cotton which they had been carrying heretofore unprotected. Movement at the ports continues liberal despite advices circulating for the purpose of inducing a holding movement at the South. Yesterday's receipts were nearly 65,000 bales, against 56,000 last week and 63,000 last year, while to-day Galveston receipts are estimated at about 27,000 bales, against 18,000 last week and 15,000 last year.

Weather conditions continue generally favorable for picking and for the maturing of the plant, with the weekly Government weather bulletin rather bearish and complaints being insignificant. Selling was general at intervals, and while bull support was noticeable during periods of extreme depressions it was believed that considerable of the cotton sold emanated from the ranks of Memphis and local bulls. Predictions in some quarters were that around 11c level inquiry from trade sources would expand, but the disposition to purchase cotton on this probability was not great. In fact, new buying is at a minimum, and the possibility of frost or storms in the very near future only tended to increase caution among bears. Incidently there was less apprehension as to the disturbance reported in the West Indies.

Sentiment was more bearish, and bullish crop estimates from the South are receiving little credence. An estimate by the Department of Agriculture of Georgia, claiming a yield of 15 per cent. less than last year in that State, was practically ignored. Last season this same authority estimated the outturn at 1,300,000 bales, when it proved to be in excess of 1,800,000 bales.

Southern spot markets were generally weak and reported declines of 1-16 to ⅛c per pound, indicating that trade demands are being readily supplied. New York spot cotton was 20 points decline, middlings 11.45. Further disturbances, political and otherwise, in some of the foreign countries are not conducive to greater trade absorption, although Manchester advices continue sanguine.

COFFEE.

December shorts in coffee were active buyers, and prices for this position crossed the 12-cent mark, making a new high record for the year. The other months were firm, and the close showed net gains of 1 to 13 points. The volume of business was large, 110,250 bags. Havre closed at an advance of ¼f, while in Hamburg prices were ¼ pfennig lower to ¼ pfennig higher. Rio declined 75 reis and Santos was unchanged. Spot coffee unchanged, 13⅝c for Rio No. 7. THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 19.—No further information is available concerning the disturbance reported in the Caribbean Sea, although the observatory at Havanna advises that at 10 A. M., to-day, its centre was near the extreme northeast point of the Yucatan Peninsula. During te next 48 hours it is likely that its influence will be felt on the south coasts, although thunder showers and squalls are probable on the middle Gulf and Florida coasts, Wednesday and Thursday.

In the United States, the weather has been generally fair with the exception of rains in the Ohio Valley and at scattered southern points.

Temperatures have fallen considerably in the Mississippi Valley, and continue below the normal, but are rising in the northwest.

Moderate temperatures prevail in the East. The indications are that the weather will be generally fair Wednesday and Thursday throughout the Middle Atlantic and New England States, the Carolinas, and the Ohio Valley.

Temperatures will not change decidedly in any part of the country during the next 48 hours.

Winds along the New England Coasts will be light variable: Middle Atlantic Coasts, light variable, mostly west and northwest; south Atlantic Coast, moderate variable.

Steamships departing Wednesday for European ports will have moderate variable winds and generally fair weather to the Grand Banks.

FORECASTS FOR TO-DAY AND THURSDAY.

Eastern New York and New England—Fair Wednesday and Thursday; slight variable winds.

New Jersey and Eastern Pennsylvania—Generally fair Wednesday and Thursday; light variable winds, mostly west and northwest.

The temperature record for the twenty-four hours ended at midnight, as taken from the thermometer at the local office of the Weather Bureau, is as follows:

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Morrell Estate Sells the Corner of Fourth Avenue and Thirty-second Street for Over a Half Million—Builders Buy on Upper Park Avenue—Big Bronx Deal.

A Fourth Avenue deal involving over $500,000, and which will be followed, so it was stated by the brokers, by a twelve or eighteen story mercantile building, added more activity to the realty market yesterday than has been noticed for several weeks. The plot disposed of includes the southwest corner of Fourth Avenue and Thirty-second Street, opposite the Park Avenue Hotel. The immediate corner is covered with one of the most disreputable wooden shacks to be seen in the well built up portions of the city, while small brick structures cover the rest of the property.

The corner has been bought by Roswell F. Easton, who has been interested in several high-class improvements in the midtown business section. The sellers were the Morrell estate, the chief beneficiaries being Robert Lee Morrell, Julia B. Peck, and Isabel de P. Kelley. It has a frontage on the avenue of 115.10 feet and on Thirty-second Street of 83.8 feet. The Tonnele-Martin Realty Company acted as brokers for the buyers, the sellers being represented by A. M. Johnson & Co.

The improvement of this corner with a high-class structure will be hailed with delight by Fourth Avenue property owners and business men, as the nature of the old buildings on it, in view of the splendid improvements in the vicinity of recent years, has rendered the contrast between the Fourth Avenue of a quarter of a century ago and as it is to-day, peculiarly striking. The property was purchased by the late Thomas Morrell from Noah T. Pike in 1870. Last March it was offered at auction in partition proceedings by Bryan L. Kennelly, but was bid in for $595,000, slightly under the upset price placed on it by the estate.

Negotiations, it was stated, are pending for a lease of the proposed building to one tenant.

Builders Buy Park Avenue Corner.

One of the largest deals in the Park Avenue district in the Seventy-second Street vicinity that has taken place for some time has just been concluded by S. M. Bier, who has sold a plot having a frontage of 96.4 feet on Seventy-fifth Street, adjoining the northeast corner of Park Avenue, to a firm of builders.

The property was sold in two parcels, that at 103 and 105 East Seventy-fifth Street, a plot 43 by 102.2 feet, being sold for Edward S. Steinam of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., while the adjoining plot at 107 and 109 East Seventy-fifth Street, 53.4 by 102.2, was sold for John H. Block. The property is now covered with four old-fashioned five-story flats.

The entire block front on the avenue is improved with two twelve-story apartments recently completed, with the exception of the northeast corner, 27.2 feet on the avenue, by 100 feet on the street. While no positive announcement of an immediate improvement of the plot just purchased has been made, the indications are that, in view of the extensive building operations in that locality, the large Seventy-fifth Street plot will not long remain in its present condition.

Times Square Theatre Buyers.

The buyers of the theatre site at 220 to 228 West Forty-eighth Street, in the Times Square section, as reported yesterday, are George W. Lederer and Harry N. Frazee. Franklin T. Seaman, the broker in the deal, has also obtained for the new owners a building and permanent loan of $225,000 on the theatre about to be erected.

Part of A. T. Stewart Estate Sold.

The old three-story building 132 Bleecker Street, on a lot 25 by 100, which was part of the original A. T. Stewart estate, was sold yesterday by William A. White & Sons to an investor. The building, which is located near West Broadway, has been held by Maxwell E. Butler for many years.

Carriage Factory for West Side.

William J. Carlin and Mary S. Searles have sold the property at 161 to 167 West Eighty-third Street, having a combined frontage of 69.9 feet by 102.2, to a buyer who will erect a new building for the carriage manufactory firm of Locke & Co., now at 218 West Eighty-fourth Street. Mr. Carlin sold the three old dwellings at 161 to 165 West Eighty-third Street and Mrs. Carlin sold the adjoining plot, occupied by a five-story flat. The carriage firm has taken a long lease on the new building. The plot to be improved is about 175 feet east of Amsterdam Avenue.

The Private Dwelling Market.

Margaret Hornidge has purchased from the estate of R. G. L. Dieffenbach 224 West Eighteenth Street, and a three-story dwelling on a lot 18.8 by 100.5, between Second and Third Avenues. The property was scheduled to have been sold at auction yesterday by Joseph P. Day.

Frederick Zittel & Sons have sold to an investor for Sally S. Tefft 325 West 101st Street, a three-story dwelling, on lot 20 by 100.8.

Big West Bronx Deal.

One of the largest deals in the western portion of the Bronx for several months has been made by Arnold, Byrne & Baumann, who have sold for Charles Brogan the dwelling and sixteen lots comprising the southeast corner of Sedgwick and Tremont Avenues. The buyer is Samuel Winters. The dwelling was erected by Mr. Brogan for his occupancy several years ago, and is one of the largest in that section of the borough.

Brooklyn.

Mrs. E. L. Spence has sold a modern dwelling in Eighty-second Street, just off Bay Parkway, to Mr. Schapiro.

A. Spero has bought a new two-family stucco house on Bay Parkway, near Benson Avenue, and Charles Littlewood, long a resident of Bensonhurst, has bought the adjoining and similar property.

Mrs. Elizabeth Lyons has sold to Patrick J. Reynolds 255 Forty-eighth Street, a four-story flat. Mr. Reynolds also bought from Goldstein & Spero, builders, six two-story dwellings at the southeast corner of Nineteenth Avenue and Seventy-seventh Street.

B. J. Sforza has sold for the Imperial Building Company 1,316, 1,362, and 1,368 Sixty-eighth Street, three two-story, one-family brick houses.

Syndicate Buys 100 L. I. Lots.

A syndicate composed of Paul H. Irwin, Carrie B. Lynch, George F., and Charles H. Knight, Mary and Charles T. Carlson, and Howard B. Fawcett, all of Canton, Ohio, and Frank E. Dussell of Alliance, Ohio, has purchased from Joseph W. McGuire 100 lots situated just west of Van Wyck Avenue, with a frontage of 527 feet on the south side of Jamaica Avenue, or Fulton Street. It adjoins the main line of the Long Island Railroad, 1,188 feet to the north from Dunton Station.

Long Island.

Mrs. Isabel A. Lane has purchased for investment the three-story brick building on the southeast corner of Broadway and Prince Street, Flushing, L. I.

The property, which is one of the most valuable in the business section of Flushing, has a frontage of 50 feet on Broadway, with a depth of 104 feet. It was bought by Mr. Graham five or six years ago, and has been held at $60,000.

The Manhattan and Flushing Realty Company has sold to Jeremiah J. O'Brien of Flushing a parcel having a frontage of 50 feet on the east side of Stratford Road, 104 feet north of North Hempstead Turnpike, Flushing.

The Lucerne Realty Company has sold to Calvin W. Weddle of Flushing a parcel of 100 feet on the north side of Fifth Avenue, and 50 feet on the east side of Nineteenth Street.

Henry H. Chivers has sold to the North Shore Construction Company a parcel having a frontage of 60 feet on Dartmouth Road, 240 feet east of Boulevard, Bayside, subject to a mortgage of $7,500.

Lewis H. Smith has sold to Otto H. Boysen of Flushing a parcel having a frontage of 36 feet on the east side of Franklin Place, 158 feet west of Parsons Avenue, Flushing.

Recent Buyers.

Robert McDonnell is the buyer of the dwelling 310 West 101st Street, reported sold recently by Adolph H. Landeker.

E. H. Kelly is the buyer of the dwelling 165 West Ninety-fourth Street, reported sold recently by Mrs. A. L. Ward.

Heilner & Wolf are the buyers of the dwelling 3 West Seventy-fifth Street, sold by James W. Halstead.

The Northward March of Trade.

There were two leases in the Fifth Avenue section yesterday which show the constant encroachment of trade on the residential section.

In the private residence block on Fifty-fifth Street, between Fifth and Madison Avenues, the dwelling 13, a four-story and basement house, has been leased for a period of ten years to a dressmaker. The house is owned by David Mahony.

The Purcell Manufacturing Company has completed arrangements to occupy the large store and basement of the property owned by the Goelet estate at the southwest corner of Fifth Avenue and Thirty-seventh Street. Recently the Goelet estate rented the property to Frank Widened for three years with a sixty-day cancellation clause.

Dwellings Leased.

D. H. Renton & Co. have leased for G. O. Ward the four-story American basement dwelling 420 West 144th Street to a client.

H. C. Senior & Co. have leased for Valetta H. Bissell the three-story and basement dwelling 255 West Seventieth Street to Manuela Martinez; in conjunction with William R. Ware the three-story and basement dwelling 167 West Ninety-third Street to D. G. H. Zimmerman, and for the Reliant Holding Company the three-story dwelling 311 West Seventieth Street to Alexander Del Mar.

The Lewis H. May Company has leased for Phebe S. Gurney her residence on the east side of Woodmere Boulevard at Woodmere, L. I., to N. Sanford Weil for a term of years.

Gustave Britt has leased for the estate of William P. Woodcock, 2d., the four-story and basement dwelling at 148 Lexington Avenue to Frank Previti for a term of years.

Ogden & Clarkson leased the building 117 West Twenty-first Street to Alice Stalb for a term of years.

East Side Cancer Hospital.

Plans have been filed for a five-story hospital on the northwest corner of Front and Jackson Streets for the Servants of Relief for Cancer, of which Rose Hawthorne Lathrop is President, with headquarters at Hawthorne, N. Y. It will be known as the Saint Roses Free Home for Incurable Cancer, and will have a handsome façade of brick with ornamental trimmings in marble and terra cotta. The building will have a frontage of 70.3 feet on Jackson Street, where the main entrance will be located, and 69.6 feet on Front Street. James W. O'Connor, the architect, estimates the cost at $100,000.

$600,000 West Side Apartment.

Plans have also been filed for a twelve-story fireproof apartment house on the northwest corner of Central Park West and Ninety-first Street for the Midas Realty Company at a cost of $600,000. It will have a frontage of 100.2 feet on the avenue by 120 feet on the street. Schwartz & Gross are the architects.

Notes.

The Holtz Restaurant Company have not leased the entire building at 604-606 Broadway, but have renewed the lease of their present premises, the store and basement.

The H. M. Weill Company will remove to their new building at 46 West Thirty-third Street about Oct. 1.

Bryan L. Kennelly has been appointed a delegate by Gov. John A. Dix to represent the State of New York at the Fourth International Good Roads Congress which is now being held in Chicago.

MAYOR WON'T STOP SUBWAY BUILDING

Doesn't Want Veto Power Over Construction Contracts—Lexington Avenue Route Safe.

SUGGESTS CHARTER CHANGE

Would Keep Power Over Franchises and Operating Contracts—Wants Another Concession from the B. R. T.

In a letter addressed yesterday to Corporation Counsel Watson, Mayor Gaynor did much to clear the air with regard to the subway situation. In the first place, he declared that he did not wish the much-discussed veto power over subway construction contracts; in the second, he made a suggestion as to the terms on which the operation contract of the new subways should be granted to the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company.

By asking Corporation Counsel Watson to introduce into the draft of the new Charter the words excepting from his veto "contracts for construction," the Mayor removed the fear that he might hinder the digging of those sections of the Lexington Avenue subway not yet contracted for. He also suggested that the Brooklyn Rapid Transit should grant transfers to its Manhattan subways not only to passengers on its elevated lines, but also on its surface cars.

Here is his letter:

OFFICE OF THE MAYOR.
Sept. 19, 1911.

Sir: It is now fully conceded that by Sections 74 and 242 of the present Charter the separate approval of the Mayor is required to every contract in the nature of a franchise for a street use, overhead, surface, or underground, and that this has been so for a generation. Experience taught the wisdom of this safeguard. It has proved of value to the city, and has never been abused. In the same way Section 5 of the Rapid Transit act, following the spirit of the Charter, confers a similar power on the Mayor, namely, in respect of selection of subway routes, of plan of construction, and of the franchise for "construction or operation," for which the Constitution of the State (to quote its exact words) requires the consent of the local street authorities.

The statement so often reiterated that these powers are new in the proposed new Charter is now abandoned. But Mr. Bassett in his speech on Saturday evening said that the new Charter extended the Mayor's power of approval to contracts of "subway construction" under the Rapid Transit act. That is the first time any one made that claim. It is now said that, while such additional power is not given in so many words in the new Charter, it is deducible from Section 1,438. I would therefore suggest that the phrase, "except contracts for construction" be interlined in that section by the Legislative Committee. It is true that Section 2 of the Rapid Transit act of 1905 seems to give this power to the Mayor over contracts of construction, but I see no reason for it. The safeguard of the Mayor's approval of every contract conferring a franchise, whether for years or in perpetuity, is important, and the Charter and Rapid Transit act should be assimilated on that head, but it is not necessary to a mere contract for construction which involves no franchise grant.

The project of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company is to get the city to construct a Subway at its own expense up Broadway in Manhattan and under other streets to Fifty-ninth Street, and turn it over to that company. The franchise contract which the company wants, and which some officials seem to desire to give, (for they have so voted,) is that in consideration of getting such subway the company will transfer to it without additional fare all of its passengers coming to Manhattan from Brooklyn by its elevated roads, and distribute them all the way up to Fifty-ninth Street. But why should not the franchise contract cover the passengers who are brought over to Manhattan by the company's surface cars also? The surface car passengers are two-thirds of all the passengers from Brooklyn. Why should they have to pay an extra fare to transfer to the subway, while the elevated passengers do not? I brought this matter before the Board of Estimate when the matter was up.

This company is now eager to have the Mayor's power of franchise approval taken away, so that he may not stand in its way of getting this valuable subway franchise unless it contains a provision for the transfer of the Brooklyn surface passengers as well as the elevated passengers. The term of the present Mayor will have expired before that time arrives, but those who control the company feel certain, as they may well do, that the people of this city will never elect a Mayor who would approve of a franchise turning the said subway over to them on the terms of transfer to it of the elevated passengers only. All passengers from Brooklyn should be carried through this subway uptown without paying an additional fare. Very truly yours,

W. J. GAYNOR, Mayor.

A. R. Watson, Esq.

President Williams of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company had left his office before the Mayor's letter was written, and could not be reached last night for an expression of his views on the transfer question.

Commissioner Cram, who was appointed to the Public Service Commission by Gov. Dix, expressed yesterday at the regular meeting of the commission, the opinion that a protest should be made against the grant of the power of veto over subway contracts to the Mayor by the new Charter. He asked whether any action had been taken in the matter during his absence, and when he heard that all that had been accomplished was the sending of a letter to the joint legislative committee, he said:

"Such a veto would only hold up subway work. Such a power is not possessed even by the President of the United States. There are already ample safeguards against the action of the commission, as it has no power to appropriate money. The Mayor may be a great man or a small man, but he cannot know as much about rapid transit matters as this commission. And you only have a Gaynor once in a generation, you know."

Charman Willcox said that he thought the best thing to be done would be the going over of the Charter word by word by the counsel of the commission, and then if there was anything on which the commission desired to take action it could express itself. He agreed absolutely on the importance of the veto provision, but pointed out that every other matter to which the commission had objected had been cut out of the draft of the Charter.

B. R. T. REPORT ON SUBWAYS.

Points Out That Broadway Line Will Serve New Pennsylvania Station.

In its annual report issued yesterday the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company gives a history of its negotiations on subways, and makes a great point of the fact that its original proposal did not involve the use of any thoroughfare in Manhattan covered by negotiations between the city and any other railroad company. It did not conflict, it maintains, with any plans for the development of rapid transit in Manhattan and the Bronx, nor in part of Queens.

It points out also that the directors of the company have already arranged for the expenditure of approximately $75,000,000 in construction and equipment, and has this to say about the needs of a subway line to serve the Pennsylvania Station and the lower west side.

The only important section not covered is that which would be served by the construction of a rapid transit line on Seventh Avenue, from Forty-second Street south, passing the Pennsylvania Railroad Station. In the event that such a line should not be constructed and operated as a natural extension of the existing rapid transit railroad, it could be made a part of the new system with a northerly extension on the west side of Manhattan, which within a few years will probably be necessary for the relief of that growing population. It should be borne in mind, however, that without any extension on Seventh Avenue the lines already comprised in the new rapid transit system will bring within short distance of the Pennsylvania Station several millions of people of Greater New York who now cannot reach it at all by rapid transit except with change of cars and for two fares. The train platforms in the Pennsylvania Station will be only 500 feet farther from the proposed Broadway Subway than the train platforms in the new Grand Central Station will be from the present Subway station at Forty-second Street.

The gross earnings of the company in the year ended June 30, 1911, were $21,986,543, an increase of $1,007,028, and the operating expenses were $12,166,367, an increase of $429,256. Its net earnings from operation were $9,820,175, an increase of $577,772, while its total income was $10,117,700, an increase of $596,482, which, after the deduction of taxes and fixed charges, left a net income of $3,148,478, an increase of $536,883.

Out of this certain charges for betterments to property were taken, leaving a surplus for operation for the year of $3,059,944, an increase of $556,909. From this surplus an appropriation for supercession and depreciation of $105,608, which was $80,315 more than last year, was made, and the total appropriations were $2,413,585, or $235,170 increase. The balance sheet surplus was $5,427,394, an increase over last year of $646,359.

Interborough Bond Issue.

The question of the issue by the Interborough Rapid Transit Company of $11,400,000 bonds under its $55,000,000 mortgage will come before the Public Service Commission at a hearing on Sept. 25 at 11 o'clock. The reasons given for the issue are the funding of floating debt and certain improvements, such as the installation of side doors on the local trains.

ALDERMEN BACK CHARTER.

Vote Down a Resolution Calling on Dix to Veto the Measure.

Alderman Folks, Republican, tried to get his associates to go on record yesterday against the proposed new city charter. He offered a resolution requesting Gov. Dix to veto the measure unless ratification is provided therein by the people. It was voted down by 39 to 27 and ordered laid on the table. Mr. Folks was not permitted even to explain his reason for voting in favor of the resolution. Vice President Bent informed him that the vote was not debatable, and the Alderman sat down. Later he said:

"The way the Tammany members of the board lined up shows just how much sincerity there is in the continual talk of the Tammany leaders about home rule for New York. I have drafted a number of legislative bills, and I know that it is impossible to perfect several hundred pages of legislation in the time given to the work by the Cullen-Foley committee.

"Nobody dares to assert that the Charter in the form it was originally proposed was anything but a patchwork. What can be said of it in its present condition? I, for one, believe that the many defects in it are the result of deliberate effort to get party and corporate advantage. But I could only echo the sentiments of experts if I discussed this phase of the Charter.

"The object of my resolution was to obtain for the people of this city a right to say under what kind of a government they should live, pay taxes, and transact business. A Tammany Board of Aldermen has denied them this right."

The Rev. John L. Belford, pastor of the Parish of the Nativity, Brooklyn, wrote this letter yesterday to Russell Benedict, President of the Brooklyn League:

Mr. Russell Benedict, 44 Court Street, Brooklyn.

Dear Sir: I regret that I cannot attend the meeting at the Academy to-morrow night. It seems beyond belief that any Legislature should pass the Charter as it stands. It seems to me that it will undo at least 50 per cent. of the progress made for good Government in our city, and it will make possible a degree of corruption which no man can fathom. If we are sure of angels for Mayors it might be a boon, but so long as we have mere men it must work for evil. Yours very truly,

JOHN L. BELFORD.

Mayor Gaynor refused yesterday to comment on the report from Albany that the insurgent Democrats had lined up against the Charter, and that it is unlikely that it will pass the Legislature in its present form.

GAYNOR AGREES TO CHANGES

Creelman Tells Legislators He Is Willing to Modify Veto Clause.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 19.—Following the appearance here to-day of Civil Service Commissioner James Creelman, who has been the spokesman of Mayor Gaynor in important matters on other occasions, word came from the Democratic leaders in the Legislature that the provision giving the Mayor absolute veto power over contracts for construction of future subways would be eliminated from the Cullen-Foley New York City Charter bill, and that the Civil Service chapter would be recast so as to restore to the State Civil Service Commission the power of supervision and regulation over the municipal Civil Service Commission which it possesses at present. These amendments would meet the principal objections of the Democrats who have gone on record as opposing the Charter bill in its present form. Word was sent to the Charter insurgents soon after the Legislature met to-day that these concessions would be made.

Mr. Creelman had a long talk with Senator Franklin D. Roosevelt of Dutchess who has been more outspoken in his opposition to the proposed Charter than any of his colleagues. A friend of the Senator stated afterward that Mr. Roosevelt had been assured that Mayor Gaynor was not only quite willing that the above changes should be made, but that any reasonable objection coming from the opposition should be met.

Despite these comforting assurances made to conciliate the Democratic opponents to the Tammany-made charter, the latter are not willing to-night to go on record as favoring the Charter bill even though further amended along these lines. Some of the opponents, in discussing the matter, have expressed fear lest after the absolute veto provision has been eliminated some other method may be invoked that indirectly would give the Mayor powers in transit matters which, according to members of the joint Charter committee, he has insisted from the outset that he should have.

The Republican members of the Legislature show no signs of weakening in their opposition to the Charter in its present form, and there is every indication to-night that they will persist in their present attitude no matter how the Charter bill is amended. It was announced to-day that the joint Republican caucus scheduled for this afternoon would be held at 11 o'clock on Wednesday next week when the Legislature will begin active work.

The plan of the legislative leaders to bring the session to a close at the end of the present week won the warm approval of Gov. Dix, but it was upset when it was learned that some of the members would be absent on both Wednesday and Thursday at the funerals of the late Assemblyman Oliver and of the Clerk of the Assembly, Luke McHenry.

ALDERMEN DECLARE FOR FREE TRANSFERS

But Refuse to Send the Committee on Laws to Albany to Urge Their Restoration.

TROLLEY MEN OPPOSE THEM

Arguments Before Public Service Commission to Show That Loss for the Companies Would Follow.

The re-establishment of a universal system of free transfers was declared to be desirable by the Board of Aldermen yesterday without a dissenting voice. The resolution in favor of it was introduced by Alderman Percy L. Davis, a Republican of the Thirty-first District, and it declared that the agitation for the restoration of free transfers had been increasing constantly for the last three years, and that the people of the city are generally opposed to the 8 and 10-cent transfers which the companies have offered.

Alderman Davis's resolution took cognizance of the proceedings on the transfer question before the Public Service Commission, and declared that that body was apparently making every effort to bring about the desired results, but without success. It also proposed that the board's Committee on Laws and Legislation should go to Albany and there press on the proper authorities in the Legislature the necessity of immediate remedial legislation, but the board struck this provision out and was content with an expression of opinion.

Meanwhile the adjourned hearing on transfers was in progress before Commissioner Eustis, and N. M. Hudson, auditor of the Second Avenue Railway, took the stand to testify that if his company were to earn 6 per cent. on the value of its tangible property, $4,048,663, it would be necessary to charge every passenger 5.79 cents. Consequently, though the company has few transfer passengers, the cost of carrying them would be more than the fare they paid.

Edward A. Maher, general manager of the Third Avenue system, said that he foresaw that free transfers would cause a decrease of earnings, and would thus mean poorer service, failure to improve the equipment, and ultimately a reduction in wages.

"I believe I am close to the people," he said, "and I am confident that they prefer a good service and the comfort of a seat to more transfers."

Mr. Maher would not admit that transfers would bring greatly increased travel, but quoted the experience of the Union Railway before transfers were abolished, when hundreds of people went every Saturday and Sunday to 129th Street and asked what was the longest ride they could take. He had seen sixty passengers carried ten miles on a car on which only two fares were paid, and he asked how that sort of business could be profitable.

Commissioner Eustis pressed him as to the basis on which the 8 and 10 cent transfer proposal had been made. Mr. Maher spoke of the use of transfers by persons who had not paid the original fare.

"But if an extra cent were charged," suggested the Commissioner, "no one would buy a transfer unless he wished to use it."

"Or to sell it for 2 cents," put in Mr. Maher.

"But that's against the law."

"It goes on just the same. In certain localities there is a regular trade in transfers, and the only way to stop it is to abolish transfers."

The hearing was adjourned till to-morrow afternoon.

TAKE PERSUER AND PERSUED.

Actor Running After Another Man Carried a Gun in Violation of Law.

Charles D. Mack, a vaudeville actor, was arrested last night on a charge of carrying a concealed weapon in violation of the Sullivan law. He had led the chase of Lewis Dalgiman, a tailor of 450 West Forty-fifth Street, whom Mack charged with having accosted Miss Frankie McCoy, his partner in vaudeville.

The police say that Miss McCoy was returning to her home at 230 West Thirty-eighth Street when she was accosted by three men in West Thirty-eighth Street. She went to the house and reported the matter to Mack, and he ran out at once to find the men. Miss McCoy pointed out Dalgiman as one of them, and as Mack started toward him Dalgiman ran toward Seventh Avenue and Mack after him. Policeman Donegan was on duty on the south side of the street, and he says he saw Mack put his hand to his hip pocket. He seized him and felt an automatic pistol.

Both of the men were taken to the West Thirtieth Street Station, where they were locked up. Mack says the weapon was one that he used as a theatrical property, and that he picked it up in his excitement as he left his room.

Dalgiman was sent to the workhouse on an indeterminate sentence by Magistrate Krotel in the Men's Night Court.

The complainant gave her full name in court as Miss Frankie McCoy White. She said that Dalgiman had approached her three times and on the last occasion said:

"I'll get you yet."

CHURCH MEMBERS DISAPPEAR

Strange Departure of a Bloomfield Pair Stirs a Congregation.

Special to The New York Times.

BLOOMFIELD, N. J., Sept. 19.—Mrs. Fanny Smith and William Bowker, 3d, of the Watsessing section of Bloomfield, have been missing from their homes since last Saturday, and to-day the father of Bowker and husband of Mrs. Smith express the belief that the pair went away together. Both were prominent workers in the Watsessing Methodist Church. It was said to-day that Mrs. Smith, before leaving her home, informed her husband, Norman Smith, that he need not put in any time looking for her as she would never come back.

Smith is deeply religious and would not allow his wife to read a newspaper except of a religious nature. This caused her to visit the Watsessing Library, where newspapers are on file, and it was there she and Bowker had their meetings.

Bowker has the reputation of being one of the best religious talkers in the State, and was held up by mothers in the neighborhood as a model for their sons. He was a member of the official board of the Methodist Church, and did not drink or use tobacco in any form. He was successful in business and owns valuable real estate. He is 30 years old and unmarried. Mrs. Smith is about the same age.

Mrs. Smith has left at home her seven-year-old daughter. The Rev. John W. Ryder, pastor of the Watsessing Methodist Church, said to-day:

"I cannot believe that they have run away. I do not know that they have gone away together, but the evidence points very much in that direction. They have been clean and upright members of the church for a long time and both have been active members."

Mr. Smith is prostrated. He refuses to let his little daughter out of his sight fearing his wife may take her away.

"She was a good wife and good mother," he said, "but she told me she would never come back. I can't explain it, anyway; it is the work of the devil. She took only a suitcase with her."

Bowker's father said: "I don't know what possessed my son. He went away without saying anything."

Winthrop Ames Goes to Europe.

Winthrop Ames, former manager of The New Theatre, sailed for Europe yesterday morning. A rumor which spread soon after his departure, that he had gone away a Benedick was promptly denied last night by his friends. Edward E. Lyons, who was house manager of The New Theatre during Mr. Ames's rule there, and who was with him almost to the hour of his departure, said: "There's not a word of truth in the story."

DIRECTORS DENY LIABILITY.

Herbert Satterlee and Frank Gould Appeal in Republic Trust Co. Case.

SARATOGA, N. Y., Sept. 19.—The management of trust companies in New York State and the liability of Directors of these organizations for losses due to their negligence are directly involved in an appeal made to-day to the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, Third Department, by Herbert L. Satterlee and Frank J. Gould of New York, former Directors of the Trust Company of the Republic, from a judgment of Justice Vankirk holding them liable for losses sustained by the trust company while they were Directors.

With eleven others, the defendants were sued by Charles H. Kavanaugh, a stockholder, who sought to recover for losses sustained by the trust company through investments made in stock of the United States Shipbuilding Company in the Summer of 1902, necessitating the reorganization of the trust company. The trial of the case resulted in a sweeping decision by Justice Vankirk holding the Directors liable for losses aggregating $369,000 and maintaining that the Directors were negligent, although they were not aware of the investments at the time they were being made. All of the Directors but Mr. Satterlee and Mr. Gould settled their share of the judgment.

The Trust Companies Association of New York State, represented by former Judge Alton B. Parker, joined in the request to-day for a review of the case, on the ground that the trust companies are vitally interested in the points of law involved concerning trust company management. The court reserved decision on the appeal.

FALLING TREE HITS AN AUTO.

Mr. and Mrs. Steuer in Machine Narrowly Escape Injury.

Snapped in two when struck by steel rods protruding from a wagon, a small tree in front of 46 Fifth Avenue fell yesterday afternoon and barely missed hitting Mr. and Mrs. Max D. Steuer of 55 West Eighty-eighth Street, who were seated in their auto at the curb line.

Mrs. Steuer heard the snapping of the wood and sprang to the ground. Mr. Steuer kept his seat. The tree struck the car a glancing blow. The Steuer chauffeur was cranking the engine and he jumped aside in time to escape injury.

The wagon belonged to the Kalamein Company of 385 Jay Street, Long Island City, and was driven by Frank Devine. He was turning his team when the steel rods caught the tree.
